Thread: Update the amount of times someone can edit a thread.

Mr. Robot - July 14, 2019, 2:44 am

Trying to edit my tutorial I am writing up - need to add this image to the top.

Quote:You cannot edit posts more than 15 times. Read our Help Docs about increasing edit limits.

Thread in question.

Maybe allow more posts for that section >> The hacking tutorial section.

You can get v3ndor which grants unlimited edits.

I'm here to post and talk - I got no money left for any upgrades right now if there's a price and I don't want to be removed from that group for not participating in any of that crap.

Spent so much time already on that tutorial already - just wanted to give it a mediocre banner to make it look a bit better. Was my legit last edit FML.

14,067 characters not including edits, changes and testing.

Maybe we can get a Hack Tutorial group like H4ck3r or some shit + more edits. That'd be nice. More incentive to do it.

Write it on a pastebin post and then embed it directly into your post. Then you can edit the paste from your pastebin account as many times as you like.

Code [paste][https://pastebin.com/example\[/paste\]](https://pastebin.com/example[/paste])

Not as aesthetically pleasing but it could still help, I've seen it used a few times for tutorials

That would be nice and all however I still need to add images/gifs and whatever else.

Normally I just draft stuff up, like 8 months ago I had like 30 tutorials ready to go in my drafts then they all disappeared one day - really frustrating. That's why a lot of the tutorials I put out now, I post the thread in it's uncompleted state and edit it from there (using previews) while editing.

But when HF keeps asking me for a captcha to preview, it can cause issues.

I'll use pastebin for long bits of code such as when I post a lot of usernames or examples of IDs but otherwise it would be nice to keep as much as I can on HF itself so if those sites have issues - people will still have access to it all on HF.

Like my pastebin could get deleted/removed for some reason, then people no longer have access to that content.

Just upgrade to vendor for unlimited edits. If you can't afford it, you can't have that benefit/privilege. Simple

Make each edit count. Edit Abuse was made for several years, thus this was done to prevent further damage. (Makes sense)

Vendor is not only pay-to-get-unlimited-edits-privilege but also requires approval too (in case you didn't knew).

Yeah that's very true, and those captchas piss me off lol especially when I'm previewing a small change just to see how it looks

I was approved for vendor back in January however it was going to cost $100. Haven't got that spare just to give other people on HF better content. If I wanted to just go for the bronze tut award like you, it's not hard - but y'know content that matters is better than posting nonsense.

10/10 ?

Spaark - July 14, 2019, 3:33 am

Slightly easier obtainable role than the former R3kt group that allows for greater accessibility to functions like more editing? And potentially posting images in the Innuendo section? :L

Holy shit lol. ?

I fookn hate the edit limits too, time that I go apply for Vendor I'd say.

Well that's the thing, I was R3kt too. I get it though, edit abuse and whatnot- it's just unfortunate for that section.

Working on other projects such as my game as well as other bits and pieces. If I could sell of an amethyst to pay for vendor and have money left over - I still wouldn't. Those were donations to HF to help site development.

Spaark - July 14, 2019, 4:12 am

I feel like this restriction just encourages people to close threads and restart them. Which is essentially duplication right?

Yeah I mean, I could do that to add my image and close this one - then if I let it die quick enough i'd get 2 threads for the price of 1 towards the award and nobody would be the wiser.

However that's naughty.

True. Spending over 2000$+ for awards but won't purchase $100 for vendor? Seems legit.

Cyber Coder - July 14, 2019, 6:23 am why should OP buy vendor to help others?makes no sense, he needs to pay to help the community?That's discouraging good content. Vendor is for those active in the marketplace and is an investment, making no sense for those who do tutorials. It would probably be good idea that sections that are not related to marketplace to have more edits.

Hopsin - July 14, 2019, 7:06 am

(Jul 14, 2019 06:26 AM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I think you misunderstand the point.

We, upgraded members who have been here for years, are being denied the ability to edit posts/tutorials to HELP THE FORUM.

I understand the damage that can happen from removing good content, but only like 5 people did that and it has negatively affected hundreds of us.

Agreed. Personally, some minor increase of edit limit would be helpful. (I highly doubt that it will change but still, suggestion counts)

Tweaks can be happened too.

Like, restore old unlimited (or at least increase amount of) edits for all sections EXCEPT marketplace. (all upgraded or ub3r upgraded)

But, vendors will have unlimited edits for all sections, INCLUDING marketplace.

I N C R E D I B L E - July 14, 2019, 7:40 am

Yeah. some forums should be an exception. The marketplace though surely be limited to OP editing. but tutorials and other helpful threads should be exempted for community betterment.

Omni and Xerotic have expressed approving people for vendor, based on their account age, marketplace activity, and other factors.

I don't participate in the marketplace anymore. If people get denied Vendor, I'd likely be an example of someone who is denied Vendor.

I write guides, many of my guides are over a year old and well over 15 edits. I can not update these guides anymore.

What now?

If things stay the way they are, HF may as well be called the Marketplace.

Truthfully it's killed a fair bit of motivation for me. I don't really have any interest in reposting my guides every 15 edits, and I'm farrrrr from perfect. Just posting my guide initially is going to take up half of my edits fine tuning things. I get that protecting content from people looking to remove it from HF is important, but the negative impact on those who want to actually contribute really sucks.

As with you on this, my threads don't get the attention they did before because I can't edit them answering questions from users in an FAQ style format to save people reading through pages and pages of replies.

By having users review the content it helps us fine tune it and make sure it's correct and easy to understand.

The preview while helpful has some issues with losing content if the page downs (often if HF lags out and you click back, you'll lose your entire write up unless you click publish) which also doesn't help.

Yeah I see where everyone is coming from but it's a good idea to upgrade to vendor get ultimate edits maybe save up for it buddy!

flavoral - July 14, 2019, 9:36 am

I think thread tags/sticks gives you additional edits for the duration of the tag on the thread.

The ability to update a thread isn't solely for marketplace related threads.

Why the fugg should we buy a sticky or tag to update a tutorial that benefits the site and not ourselves?

This limitation has stopped me from releasing content.

Mate chill fuck down. I'm simply providing the current best solution available. I also think that edit limits should be only for marketplace threads, but I'm not sure how possible is it to make it happen.

Why would you need to edit a normal thread more than 10x bud? I think with this implemented it would get a lot of new threads made which is needed on HF.
