Thread: Short story/poetry slam styled thing. - Hacking related

This guy from this forum was pissin' me off,
He was a complete troll talking shit while I just sat back and scoffed,
Got to the point where I was eventually done with his shit -
Looked at his profile and decided "talk - get hit."

Looking through his posts,
I quickly found something worth while,
He posted his website running wordpress listed on his profile -

Alright lemme wpscan it for a laugh please make this quick.
- fuck it's all up to date, I guess i'm not that slick.
At this point I thought i'd quit, tabbed back to the forum.
Saw he hadn't stopped, decided that's it clear he's not going to change his decorum.

Starting back up my Kali box I began fuming,
Staff weren't dealing with his bullshit
-Even though 10 people had scam reports open he wasn't even disputing.
Openly admitting to ripping people off, I wont lie, at times it was kind of amusing.
He was witty i'll give him that much- but the other members just found it confusing.
Anyway I start up Wordpress scan and hit him with a dictionary attack -
A few minutes later i'm in as his password was extremely quick and easy to crack.
His password was p@ssword - this was going to be routine.

Couldn't find much within his site except some email addresses.
I decided to weleakinfo those to find passwords and access'his
- other accounts.
13 results, most of them weren't decrypted.
2 were however and just as I had predicted - it was his last name with 2 digits on the end -
I started to feel conflicted.

See the two digits were a nine and an eight, which it's nice to find but it's not always that great - he's just a kid probably getting bullied at home and letting it out online.
Then I thought fuck that, this kid is mine.
It's 2019 and that makes him legally an adult, if he wants to scam people online
- i'll see if I can't put him -in- line - it's his own damn fault.

I started trying to access his amazon, skype and other accounts - to no avail.
Trying on Facebook I find the holy grail-it showed me a profile picture and the password was only changed 2 weeks ago...
I let out a deep exhale - it's time the people get what they were owed.

I search his name on Facebook - find his profile. I can't add him but I can start looking at the IP addresses from the databases and where his location is.
Nothing on whitepages - no address, nothing - and his page was pretty locked down, except one thing.

One small thing.
His job.

I saw where he worked and now he was fucked.
The next day I drove to his job. Watched him get out of his truck and walk inside.
I strap a spare phone to the bottom of his vehicle -
See I wanted to find where he would reside.

That afternoon I check findmyphone - see he's parked up at his humble abode.
I head over and sit a fair bit down the road. Yagi antenna pointing in his direction straight at his home.
I quickly acquire the packets for his wifi network and see he doesn't live alone..

Anyway, It's finally time the people got what they were owed.
After a few hours of trying different combinations on hashcat I give up and pay $10 to gpuhash.me

Finally, I have what I need.

Third day.

I head down to his house while he's at work, I connect up to his WiFi and start poking around.
I'm pretty sure nobody is home as i'm watching network traffic and there's nothing to be found.
I start scanning using Armitage in Kali, I find a few vulnerable services and just throw a couple of attacks. I manage to get into his router settings using his username and password was 'hacks'

I craft up a login page for his forum account and redirect all traffic to the forum domain to my ipv4.
Sure enough he quite happily enters his details when he gets home at around half past four.

This however wasn't why I was here.

I decided to inject a script into every page he visits online, watching what websites he visits with urlsnarf and images he sees via drifnet nothing unusual, I decide to bind my RAT with a file he's downloading now it's just a matter of time.

I head home and rest for the evening. I'm less mad at this kid now even though he was a bastard for thieving and deceiving.

I hear an alert on my machine a few hours later. I see his device has connected and I now have full control.

Now we have to be patient. I start taking what I can from his machine without anything being too obvious. I don't want him to know what's happening and be onto us.

Watching what he does in real time now. I don't risk editing his webcam drivers and disabling the light. I still want to punch him in the face, and at this stage I still just might.

Eventually he heads to sleep, leaving his computer fully open and ready. I take over - he keeps a file on his computer with passwords and even his mnemonic key for his wallet.

I dump everything directly into the forums donation address and that's when I edit his wallpaper to simply say;

'What's done is done, this is your chance to change'.

>> Just to be clear, none of this actually happened. I just thought it would be an interesting style/way of writing and wanted to try my hand at it. I don't hate it, but I think it has lots of room for improvement clearly.

I want to get better at it or work with other users and maybe make scenarios/situations where we can talk about tools in a creative way and how they can be used effectively.

I think it would really encourage new people to the scene and familiarize them with certain aspects.

I write sort of slam poetry type things, they are more based on my life and emotions, but I really enjoy your style of writing.

Thanks man and i'd love to see some at some point.

I just wanted to try my hand at it, thought there might be a group of users on HF who might be interested in collabing and then even animating or drawing images for each part of the story.
