The picture wasn't even that big of a deal.

That's going to leave some crazy scar though.

Condasoft - July 18, 2019, 4:19 pm

Had surgery on my hand last year shattered the middle joint of right ring finger while I was drunk, the pain after surgery was unbearable - not to mention I was using the hand 2 days later because well the computer missed me.

That's going to leave some crazy scar though. I can't wait for the amazing scar, I'm telling everyone I was attacked by a shark and I live in Scotland, so...

Yea, the pain I agree after surgery is the worst, not gonna lie... but I'm not suppose to be using it but the Orthopaedic Surgeon told me to use my lower arm and not my upper arm.

HF.Psych - July 18, 2019, 4:46 pm

I kinda hope it does, it'll look badass as fuck but yea, I wasn't long back from the Doctors as they wanted to look over it just to see how it's getting on and they said it's healing really nice.

I'd rather a man who was strong and tested than a man who head to toe moisturises daily.

Battlescars are hot. Just like tattoos.

Is the concept of snappin your collar bone then having people who spent years in debt with sleepless nights training and getting educated cut into your flesh cleanly to fix something that has caused and/or led to the death of some of the toughest warriors our planet has seen, all while ensuring your incredible advanced body converts matter from our universe to heal and protect you for a longer life ...

not 'cool' enough for you?

Not really lying, I've told the story in another thread but most of my friends also know what happened but for a JOKE I've said it was a shark attack, as I live in Scotland the likely hood of getting a shark here is 0.

Cooligan - July 19, 2019, 6:27 am

In 5-10 years you'll be able to say you were in an insane knife fight back in the day and were cut pretty bad, but at least you were able to walk away from it. ;p

Maybe lighten up a bit and try not shit on people who are joking around in a harmless manner.
