Thread: Goals you wish to accomplish in life?

Sooty - July 23, 2019, 8:26 pm

What are your specific life goals?

Personally, my goal is to make enough money to travel and sightsee consistently.

Rigel - July 23, 2019, 9:13 pm

I'd love to make money doing what I love and then use it to finance my hobbies and traveling!!

Slightly off topic, but what is "enough" money to you guys? Just curious how much money you'd feel is enough to keep traveling.

phybe? - July 23, 2019, 9:24 pm

My biggest life goal is retiring my parents.

Enough sustainable income that I can pay rent and all bills while saving up for travel and events I want to go to. Income where I don't have to pinch pennies.

It's never enough, brother.

Once you hit your goals, your hunger to hit bigger goals increases. It's a cycle which never stops.

Android 17 - July 24, 2019, 12:04 am

Make enough money online that I can stay at home with my kid and fiancée. Other than that I want to travel the country in an RV.

Pikachu - July 24, 2019, 12:06 am

Make enough money to sustain myself and live comfortably, and continue on my spiritual path, gaining more wisdom and learning new things as life goes on.

Tip: Never list your goals in public.

debian - July 24, 2019, 9:47 am

To be happy. I don't care if I'm rich, what I'm doing for work, and who my wife/friends are. As long as I'm happy

Same as yours pretty much...

I'd love to climb Mt Everest or Mt Fuji one day...

funtela - July 24, 2019, 10:01 am

Happiness is my goal in life. Whether I'm rich, or just comfortable. As long as I'm happy where I'm at.

Ivex - July 24, 2019, 12:24 pm

To enjoy life, to make a bit of a difference, to see the world.

Sooty - July 24, 2019, 6:44 pm

I have really enjoyed the goals posted so far. GL to everyone on your path to happiness.

Find that true love once more to prove that I'm capable of loving again. Settle down with a nice job, happy family. Eventually marry, have children, watch them grow up in good health. Retire by the beach, smoke a joint and drink my whisky.

My life planned right there.

Obviously it can be argued that I will never make substantial change for the entire planet but I hope to get to a point where I can survive off what I'm doing, and have enough in the end to help others grow as well. As art is going to be an incredibly difficult industry for me to succeed in, I would find the upmost satisfaction in making it easier for someone else, and I'm glad that I've had the opportunity to do so already :)

TheDabDoctor - July 25, 2019, 5:02 pm

I personally need to speak with Elon Musk about furthering my life. He is creating technology that can merge brains and computers and I am dying of brain cancer so it is an avenue worth looking into. I also need to finish this damn lawsuit against a doctor. I would like to start a company but I am lacking imagination.

We are born to die and my goal is to die "happy" not in pain, not in hospital, not in debts.. peaceful dead even I won't experience anything after dead and maybe not even before the dead.

My life is pretty much simple but on the other side I could respond with something like what's the point of having fun when one day it goes all away.

I mean cherishing what you have, when you have it. Nothing lasts forever so make the most out of your time. That's a really straight-forward responds that I respect!

You are true with that, mostly likely traveling around the world and exploring other countries, having decent money for living and so money freedom.

But yeah, I get your point we need to find something in our lives we like and make the most so we can be happy with our success, the more "negative" part is we can die at any time and when you die the fun, memories and experience dies with you.

That's a good goal. The more you think about that deep, dark void of a thought that will definitely leave you unhappy and lead you mentally to a place you don't want to be. If you make an impact on other peoples' lives as much as possible, then you consider that although my life ended along with all my memories. The memories you made with others live on. That's probably the hardest part- not being there, but you technically always are. Deep down in everyone's thoughts and emotions.

Yeah, that's true.

Most of your nearest "good" friends will always remember you in a good way and the good memories.

The thing people says "People only remember bad things or people will forget few months after your dead" is not so true tbh, few of my near buddies died and and if it's 1 month or 1 year or 5 years I still remember them.

I'm really sorry about your friends, but they're probably thankful they weren't forgotten. Close bonds like those will never be forgotten, no matter the situation.
