

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Any ideas how to find Remote programming job?

casuall - August 1, 2019, 12:01 pm

Hey,

Anyone here had success in finding a remote job? Currently i'm working fulltime (40hours/week) in a software enineering company as Software Engineer.

I'm looking for some extra work which I could do from home. I believe I could get 20-30hours per week.

Anyone had success in finding anything like that? I'm from Europe if that matters.

tux1 - August 3, 2019, 7:16 am

You can use websites like freelancer to advertise your services, you can work remotely for hourly charge.

MavenGradle - August 3, 2019, 8:44 pm

Fiverr is a well accepted place for this as well:

Access to This Page Has Been Blocked

joker69696 - August 8, 2019, 10:46 am just upgrade your skills... work hard and you will easily get opportunities :)

casuall - August 16, 2019, 12:04 pm

(Aug 8, 2019 10:46 AM)joker69696 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) just upgrade your skills... work hard and you will easily get opportunities :)

Useless advice honestly. I do have job as software engineer, i'm looking for something extra - like 20-30 hours per week, which would be mostly on weekends.

Such times do not suit everyone, so i'm looking for partner who would be ok with me working on weekends mostly.

joker69696 - August 20, 2019, 6:09 am

So what are the criterias to get a job as a software engineer according to you :)

Vossen - August 26, 2019, 4:19 am

<https://remoteok.io/> is the way to go.

Nosymbols - August 26, 2019, 3:15 pm

You can always approach jobs you like the look of and ask if remote working would be an option. Sometimes they allow it but don't advertise it, so it's always another avenue to explore.

You can also try googling for companies that normally allow remote working and keep an eye out for any future openings from them.

anikii69 - August 27, 2019, 7:02 am

(Aug 1, 2019 12:01 PM)casuall Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hey,

Anyone here had success in finding a remote job? Currently i'm working fulltime (40hours/week) in a software enineering company as Software Engineer.

I'm looking for some extra work which I could do from home. I believe I could get 20-30hours per week.

Anyone had success in finding anything like that? I'm from Europe if that matters.

I have been doing remote work for the past few years now and I have never employed myself nor worked for any company on a full-time basis. There are tons of forums, classified ads page, and employment websites you can look at. Since you have a full-time, it won't be a problem for you and you have experience.

A good place to start is at classified ads page such as Craigslist. Try to either post an ad (never share personal information just your skills and maintain pure discretion of your experience) or maybe look at ads that are looking for a certain service like web development projects or software development projects. It's just a matter of negotiation so that you get what you want and you will never be scammed. Take note that, when you look for part-time work at Craigslist, always be careful with scammers or people who will ditch you when work is done. This issue is not just at Craigslist but almost everywhere in the net and I have experienced it also.

Anyway, good luck to you and happy hunting! ?

(Aug 26, 2019 04:19 AM)Vossen Wrote: [\[CITE\] Remote Jobs in Programming, Design, Marketing and more](#) is the way to go.

Currently looking at this now, and thank you for this suggestion on the thread. ?