Thread: The forbidden books of herbal medicine

debian - August 17, 2019, 12:06 pm

Thought you guys might find this conspiracy theory interesting.

There exists a book (well a set of books, actually) that contain herbal medicine recipes that will cure most diseases/sicknesses.

There's extensive content on completely curing Alzheimer's, Diabetes, HIV/AIDS, most cancers, and so much more.

The 'government' would never let these books fall into public hands as the pharmaceutical industry would completely crash.

The books also contain dietary guides that if followed, one would easily live to over 100 years

It just sounds like some bullshit product that gets sold on clickbank every day.

Also, if the government had the ability to "never let these books fall into public hands" then that means that they have access to these sources or they had the people who created these medicines in custody or killed. I think a lot of high ranking officials would be keeping their families alive for a long time if they had the information you claim exists.

Also, there's nothing from stopping someone anywhere in the world from accidentally or purposely trying to recreate these medicines and the world's governments would have to actively be watching everyone in their territory to make sure they don't make this miracle cure. So then if a person did happen to create such a cure then they'd almost definitely use the cure(s) on their family members if they got cancer, because that's what people who love their families do.

So I'm sorry to be so cutting, but it sounds like a complete load of bollocks made to trick people into paying hundreds of dollars for some cure which doesn't exist. Or what's more likely an ebook, selling at $47. Utter. Rubbish.

We live in the age of the internet. If such a thing existed in text, it would have leaked just fine onto the internet. No amount of government censorship could stop the many ways to get around it.

And if it were possible to be sealed from the public so well, how did this theory get out? I'm playing off the idea being real, of course.

These books are most definitely not for sale, so no "bollocks to trick people into paying".

The 'world's governments' do actively watch everyone and make sure they don't publish cures they don't want published.

The 'government' does kill herbal doctors that are curing cancer, AIDs, etc. (read about Dr. Sebi, Dr. Jeffrey Bradstreet, Dr. Christine Daniel, just to name a few)

The 'government' easily has the power to censor the internet so that 99.9% of people would never see this even if it did get leaked

Well how come you know about it then? If the government can do all these things? I don't really see how this adds up...they wouldn't want anyone talking about it.

There are loads of these kinds of resources online claiming to show you how to cure all these kinds of illnesses

<https://www.reverse-diabetes-today.com/>

<http://www.theictm.org/big-diabetes-lie/>

I'm just not buying it...

Where did you find this information about these books?

We can talk about it since like for example, this thread wouldn't cause any real damage so they'll allow it. If I started posting cancer cure recipes (for example - I don't have any, of course) that would be a different story

No insider information or anything - just an informed guess

The books are not secret, it's just that you have to learn how to use the herbs yourself.

Example, here are some on Amazon:
