Thread: .Net botnet \(A tutorial botnet for beginners\)

Qwickload - August 26, 2019, 7:05 am

Being a student I really don't have much time to work on this, it will be open source this will be a community tool; I want something for people to learn with and something for noobies that would be more simple for them and give them an easy time learning, while not being outdated or a really bad example as what's supposed to be a "good" botnet

Yes I understand .net malware isn't inherently good; but it's also not meant to be used in a real environment;

I'll make updates regularly (Every Saturday perhaps) for anyone interested

Features or things I intend to include in the net are as follows
Full tutorial for XAMPP, VPS, & CPanel

Just some basic grabbing and key-logging capabilities

I may include some sort of RDP via external client (I'll get back on that 1)

Code This list IS SUBJECT TO CHANGE!

Nothing I've said is set in stone and may change with time

I'm looking forward to working with the community

Also no this has nothing to do with my other thread about panels.

who need .net botnet in 2019 ?

They are Plenty Open source Botnet "Native" or even Quality Product sell here like "Darkrat" "Warzone" etc...

Why does you want people spend time on such project ?

Plenty Botnet Setup service exist in HF and with 3-4min of research over the net , that not hard find Tutorial too setup any botnet (Just google it and u will see)

1. These are all paid services.
2. Two this isn't a setup service
3. I specifically stated that this project would be UPDATED AND MAINTAINED.

God you people can be awfully slow ???

Not for a very long time

I, for one, think it is great that we have people contributing to the community like this. Thank you for giving those of us who are slow in the head a source to study from and learn, because this community needs it. Unfortunately, those who need it the most will not understand it, or will not care enough to try. But still, I thank you, for trying to improve this community.
