9/10 of these devs do. Most of them don't do any of it themselves either - they pay other people to create the websites and tools, then just sell them.

So did they caught hackers from Nov 2016, 2017?

Meh..

Sure but weren't all those domains registered to the hacker? Or were they websites he hijacked?

My understanding was that they checked the c&c's involved, did a whois, got his email & phone, found his facebook page.

Even if he didn't post shit on his FB bragging, they would have claimed it was him. Forgetting people can register websites under other peoples names.

Wow thats crazy, he messed up big time

Exe - November 19, 2019, 2:50 pm

Dude just had to flex on facebook fam lol

Samantha Johnson - November 19, 2019, 10:35 pm

How dumb you have to be to even use social media if you're doing something illegal, let alone bragging about it...
