In my experience, if you're going for Google dorks, try files with php extension. If they ask for a variable parameter, there's a chance they might be vulnerable to SQLi.

you'll need a centralize list of what already been dumped so whenever u have a new dump-able site, u check from the list u can easily code the list using php / mysql / sqlite / or even just a text file

I have a priv8 list of sqli vulns. fresh and 98% hackable.
i can sell it to you, if the price is right.
