Thread: Let's find the HF Help Docs Easter Egg

debian - September 7, 2019, 9:08 am

So I've seen a few times mentioned that there's an Easter Egg somewhere in the Help Docs.

Maybe you can even win an award for finding it?

The Cup of Joe award's description is "TBD", but the only one that actually earned this award (Makaveli The Don) has this description: "Found hidden Help Doc secret."

If you already know the secret, don't ruin it - give a tiny hint instead Cheers ?

This looks interesting, would love to help out finding this :)

lol if I am not mistaken this was actually an April Fools Joke by a Staff. Not sure if it's true.

I have a good feeling that two members won't be rewarded for finding the same help doc secret, though I definitely could be wrong on that one.

Regardless if there's more easter eggs, there's a reason they haven't been found yet; it's probably not easy lmao.

I like the idea of this though. Reminds me of trying to crack the old prestige formula.

So I'm guessing that the Easter Egg (if it exists) would probably be found through the search engine of the Help Docs. Either that or by looking through each and every help document.

If you search (without quotes) "or 1=1", HF's trusty firewall blocks your request (makes sense. It blocks this in any post request throughout the site)

So maybe just an odd search request will yield the Easter egg. Thoughts?

Yeah, I doubt two users would earn the same award, but it does make me think that the easter egg exists

Omni was memeing. There's no hidden secret.

I can't be bothered trying to find them but I'd be interested in seeing what they were.

You are right.

Hundreds of people were searching for it and found nothing.

Maybe it's real thing now, who knows haha.

It's just a trick to get you reading the Help Docs. It worked though.

Everyone that took part in that thread can no longer use the excuse "I didn't know that was against the rules" ? ?
