Thread: Ignore List feature \(bypass\)

Cooligan - September 8, 2019, 3:17 pm

Just as the title states, I just now found that you are able to bypass the Ignore List feature and I felt that it should be reported for obvious reason.

When on someones Ignore List, you're not able to view their profile, PM them or send them a message via Convo's. However with the new "Convo's" feature I stumbled upon a way that you're able to bypass the Ignore List and message the user through Convo's, even though there's obviously no way you can just click a button to start a Convo with a member who has you ignored as you cannot view their profile.

I had a friend of mine test this with me once I realized it was a possible bypass, and I can now confirm that it does bypass the Ignore List feature.

Note: I will not be posting how to do this publicly of course. However:

@Omni: If you would like me to explain how this is done, I will gladly PM you with exactly how it's done.

Test: I had ScreemS put me on his Ignore List:

Test: I'm still able to message ScreemS via Convo's. Normally you wouldn't be able to, however I did find a way to bypass it as shown below:

PM's are all set though. I tested those with ScreemS as well and I was blocked from sending anything using the method I used to send him a message in Convo's. I just thought this should definitely be reported as I can see people abusing this bypass at some point.

I have no idea how he discovered his way of initiating the Convo and it could be completely different from how I did as there's one very clear way and one not-so-clear that I've found so far.

course.

It's not like it's some sort of private method lol. There are other ways to bypass the ignore-list and contact that user too.

A user can also just ignore the guy if he keeps messaging him. Like literally ignore, not replying back.

We know. Not a huge deal. We'll have everything in Convo sorted out over the next couple weeks. It's a huge project.

You contacted me offsite and I already told you we were aware of this. "If it's about convos and ignore list I know". Convos are in their infancy and it'll be another 1-2 weeks until we get it to where we need it to be.
