If so, tell me some so I can get reading. I've been motivating a lot of people lately and would like to read into some books.

If anyone would like to chat it up, please dm me!

I listened to Ant Middleton's book through Audible. Great app if you just wanna kick back and listen to the story rather than read it.

It's all about how his life had it's ups and downs, how he overcame them and embraced them.

I'm also sure that if you download Audible you get a free book to download as part of a welcome.

I recently read the The Subtle Art of Not Giving a F*ck by Mark Manson.

It really motivates you to use your time right, to something that matters. It inspired me to find something meaningful in my life.

"Outliers: The Story of Success" by Malcom Gladwell.

The book is not designed to be motivational, but the way Gladwell breaks down the factors of success stories, you walk away feeling like you have gained surgical knowledge on what it takes to get to where you want to be.

Most of that is faux-confidence, but it is a great book nevertheless.

Just downloaded it on Audible :)

Anything from Mitch Albom is pretty great. It makes me feel good about life and myself. I don't know if it would be considered motivational though.

Awesome! I need to use Audible myself as I rarely have time to sit and read...

Same. Well I have time. I'm just lazy. I need to read more.

"The 7 Habits Of Highly Effective People"

Not exactly motivational, but this will change your perspective of how effective people work.

Self motivation is the best. Successful people motivate themselves not others. I heard this one from Dan Lok on Youtube

I liked Robert Kiyosaki's book Rich Dad, Poor Dad.

GalaxySas - September 11, 2019, 4:27 am

I read this book. I also liked her. She is very motivational and vital.
