ririki - September 12, 2019, 1:32 am

Starting with right one, going to left one and back to right once it gets boring.

Linux X - September 12, 2019, 1:36 am

I guess on both sides but most likely in the right.

Totes - September 12, 2019, 2:03 am

Totally the same - chew on left but right handed. Does it mean anything?

SneakyHF - September 12, 2019, 2:29 am

As a kid I used to be really conscious about his, not chewing too much on one side. But now I don't even think about it, so not sure what to say which is my most dominant side.. lol

I. Chew on both sides, chow with my whole mouth

Krepto - September 12, 2019, 3:01 am

Mainly on my right side, never actually thought about this haha.

Mac Miller - September 12, 2019, 4:14 am

Chewed on my left in my childhood, Got a bad cavity we couldn't afford to fix so I switched to my right, now that I'm healthy I don't think about it. Probably my left though.

Chew on the both sides, but do it mostly on the right.

What thing does even make us choose a side for chewing?

?ytes - September 12, 2019, 4:26 am

Over time, chewing on one side of the mouth can lead to strain, sensitivity and sometimes TMD (Temporomandibular disorders.) This can result in jaw problems such as locking and pain in the jaw joints.

Take a look at your chewing habits and try to chew with both sides, if possible. If you are experiencing pain when chewing with one side of your mouth, you may have an infection, cavity, cracked tooth, or jaw issues.

I laughed at the thread title. But right side.

Pyro - September 12, 2019, 5:31 am i don't chew to be honest

Meterpreter - September 12, 2019, 5:32 am

Both sides. Mildly OCD about dispersing the amount of chews :')

Vyrkfrir - September 12, 2019, 5:33 am

I used to chew on my right side, but I've been grinding my teeth in my sleep since I was 12 and now it's too painful to eat with thy side.

Dental is fucking expensive as, poor people don't deserve to have teeth is basically the message that procedure costs give.

Rigel - September 12, 2019, 8:08 am

I tend to chew with my left side for some reason.

AYMG - September 13, 2019, 8:43 am
