I've been keeping up with the manga for a few years. The adaptation has been doing well imo, especially in comparison to the likes of Berserk 2016, by maintaining the story and pacing as well as it has (and yes, the animation too thankfully). However, from what I know from the manga, I do believe the anime will only cover the first 25-33% of the manga thus far. That is due to a large tone shift after this point which caused a drop in the viewership of the manga, however I will say the more recent chapters have been picking up pace and its getting back to where it was in the beginning which has been bringing back some readers. But we shall have to see where the anime decides to end off on the story thus far.

Also, about fucking time they get to the duel between Thorfinn and Thorkell, this section of the plot is a bit dragged out in comparison to the manga but about time.

Definitely a great anime, sometimes the exposition gets a little bit slow but and unnecessary to me but it's still amazing.

I've been in love with vikings for a long time. I started with the series Vikings. When I heard Vinland is launching I was so hyped and now I'm not disappointed.

One of the best anime 2019.
