Thread: How long does BTC take to confirm? blvckhvt - September 18, 2019, 5:39 am

I have made a big send of $2000 of BTC, it is mark as pending and not confirmed yet. Will it take much more time because of big size? Sorry for bad English.

Quote:The Blockonomics.co transaction explorer has now integrated estimates from BitcoinFees.21.co! We currently return a time estimate that is one half of the max time given for the related fee level at BitcoinFees.

How do I use this?

Visit Blockonomics.co

Enter your transaction ID (example: 4ff24694b1b8f85d6b1e8c64360b283336334ba042f4d602741a1d5ec1614d1a) or lookup your unconfirmed transaction using any of the addresses associated with your transaction (such as recipient address). In the case of an address lookup, Blockonomics will automatically show pending transactions in a separate tab.

Blockonomics will then show you the current elapsed time since the transaction was detected and estimated time required for confirmation based on current BitcoinFees data.

This is what I use to estimate confirmation times, it is quite accurate.

If you can share the transaction id here I can share up with you what priority is it on the miner's list.

Usually not to long just depends where you sent the BTC from?

blvckhvt - September 18, 2019, 8:11 am

It is confirmed thank you all.

Just for future reference, this would be a better section for this: Marketplace Discussions
Also, it shouldn't take longer than an hour to get all three confirmations.

Like 15 to 20 min for 6 confirms.
