

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: how to win paypal dispute as buyer?

pr.account - September 19, 2019, 3:09 am

hi. i send some one 60$ paypal as goods and service in exchange for btc. can somebody help me get my money back. im new with paypal

thanks

Royal ! - September 19, 2019, 4:31 am

If you sent as goods/services simply open up a chargeback saying item not received?.

TridentX - September 19, 2019, 4:41 am

You're going to need to offer proof to them that you actually ordered a good or service and didn't receive it. It will depend on what the seller says in response to the chargeback. Having been on the seller side of these and winning most of them, it comes down to how far the buyer is willing to go vs. how far the seller is willing to go. If you tell them you were buying BTC, you're going to lose. It's against the T&C. I would try and figure out a service that you could have ordered that would be hard for the seller to prove that they didn't provide to you.