Zyptic - September 19, 2019, 9:41 pm

Fun Fact: Today marks my 10th year on HF.
Hopefully this will be a day for me to remember.

My Computer - September 19, 2019, 9:58 pm

Aw yeah, let's see them aliens!!!

Mr. Robot - September 19, 2019, 10:12 pm

5 or so hours to go guys let's get them titties.

Crypt - September 19, 2019, 10:16 pm

About to watch these nerds get shot. Grab your popcorn boys.

Krepto - September 19, 2019, 10:47 pm

I really can't wait to see how this is about to go down lmao.

Deal - September 19, 2019, 10:50 pm

Is it happening today? Wow.

Linux X - September 19, 2019, 11:28 pm

I don't think this is real "Area 51" but whatever..

AnonFawkes - September 19, 2019, 11:31 pm

I think they would discover more by joining the military and simply learning whats hosted there.

. DESENSITIZATION

From the point of view of evolution, prejudice is an alerting signal, warning tribal mammals that a potentially dangerous alien mammal is in the vicinity, and should be fought or fled. Alerting mechanisms respond to novelties in the environment, because novelties represent change from the usual, and are, therefore, potentially important.

One of two things can happen: (1) If the alerting mechanism is very strongly activated, it will produce an unendurable emotional state, forcing the tribal mammal to fight the novelty or flee it. (2) If, however, the novelty is either low-grade, or simply odd without being threatening, the alerting mechanism will be mildly activated, producing an emotional state that, if other environmental circumstances militate against it, will be too weak to motivate any actual behavioral response. In the latter case, the mammal may peer curiously at the novelty for quite some time, but will not do anything about it, or to it.

In the case of Area51, the coming horde will be seen as a scenario 1 "(1) If the alerting mechanism is very strongly activated, it will produce an unendurable emotional state, forcing the tribal mammal to fight the novelty or flee it. "

Thus people will probably get shot and or arrested.

If they did strategy 2 "(2) If, however, the novelty is either low-grade, or simply odd without being threatening, " by simply joining the military and asking or going in person to see what was at Area 51, I think they would discover more truth.

Damn, sounds like the stream is going to go offline when they actually start storming, they're starting to drive to the border and other people have already too and come back with pictures. I hope it doesn't go offline though, even despite the technical difficulties these guys seem to be the only ones streaming what's happening. We're now an hour away from when it's going to start!

They're all abducted by greys, none of this ever happened.

Fair, but I'm sure these guys are equipped with riot gear so them getting shot either way is unlikely, that and they announced a raised fine of $1000 for trespassing when it was $500 before. Between the Nevada National Guard, medics, and other measures they've taken when preparing for roughly 30,000-40,000 people, I'm sure they've thought of different measures to use besides resulting to lethal force, though they technically can't do anything until people trespass. Still, like you said, they will either get stopped or not get close enough to be shot in the first place. Suppose the News will tell us eventually.

Either way, they hit a dead zone, so we won't be seeing any action.

Yeah I'm sure we'll hear about things happening, but if anyone did get close enough to get shot, they kinda deserve it in my opinion. These kinds of stunts are why political enemies laugh at the west, it makes the countries seem out of control. Maybe a load of rubber bullets will get used, would be better than executing these idiots, maybe...

I mean that is fair, with how difficult it would be to push them to the point of lethal force, seeing as they have other measures and backup personnel, I feel like it would take a lot for someone to get shot. That is definitely fair but at the same time, the military and government have to approach this scenario carefully. The whole "Wait man I was just joking!" and all the other stupid shit that's going to come up as people get arrested for trespassing, and blatantly ignoring the military's warning. There again, if even one person dies, or is injured by gun wound (provided the temperatures and wildlife don't get them first) there will be this huge political uproar, because "raiding" a military base is just "fun and games" to everyone, it's all the government's fault if they protect their assets, these are just innocent kids, so on so on. Either way though, I can definitely see the rubber bullets being used, as well as other riot prevention means such as tear gas, etc. Though that would only be if the people that show up seriously push their boundaries. They have the enforcement there to arrest most of the trespassers, and while it may not be the eventful thing we all want to see, it'd honestly be safer for everyone else, not forcing the base to use harsher tactics to keep these guys out.

To further the joke, there's "rock throwers" and "Kyles" to break down the walls, Naruto Runners etc. "Their bullets can't stop us if we run fast enough." As you can see, it was all just a joke, combining different memes and becoming a meme itself, but these people who showed up took it way to seriously.

It's mostly all a joke, but rooted in the myth of there being aliens in Area 51. They just wanted to be edgy and funny, and it's just been blown out of proportion, mostly by the mainstream media.

Exactly! That and conspiracy theories and the "alien hunters" that may or may not have shown up. It's definitely become something it was never meant to be in the first place. My explanations probably aren't the greatest since it's pretty late/early for me, so thank you for adding on!

If it's making you uncomfortable, then maybe you should get off the thread for now, but I doubt they will be using lethal force of any type, despite them having the authority to, they will be prepared to protect the base though. I feel like most of what they'll encounter in the desert is more of a threat. They also have medics on site.

They really are, they saw a crowd of people showing interest and just showed interest themselves out of solidarity or morbid curiosity. There's no real intellectual drive behind any of this Area 51 thing.

I got on the Facebook page just to make sure what I say is correct, its now "Official Alienstock Tour" which is some concert type event to divert from the raid, the numbers show 2.1 million going and 1.5 million interested, which in total is 3.6 million people that have marked something on the page. The dude who made it is trying to cover his back though, this whole thing was supposed to be a joke and he never expected people to actually follow through with it.

Exactly! Plus they've basically screwed their background checks. Imagine seeing a Trespassing charge from a military base on all these kids' resumes. I mean at least it's not a felony and they left with their lives I suppose.

Agreed, I can't imagine the looks on their employers' faces when they get the background checks back, then they'll all wonder why they're not getting any jobs, at least ones that are better than what most felons can get (fast food jobs, for example).

I will at least say the picture I posted wasn't accurate at all, was called on it and realized after watching the stream more that it was fake. But not tons. There's no official counts anywhere, but based on the stream, not tons. Someone got arrested apparently, but as long as they don't go in the base I think they're okay.

I agree lol, but I'm happy it didn't go horrifically. I mean yeah, it was lame, but at the same time those people looked like they were having the time of their lives, I would've loved to have been that close to the complex, but not to take the risks they did to do so. I think only one person got arrested, so I feel like they were all really lucky.

No sadly, they just mentioned it in the stream but their data bummed out right before they were going to share the video, they should have it up on their channel soon though, but they were asking the guards permission to post it. There were a few people still being dumb and trying to go through the gates and whatnot, so likely someone breached the perimeter and was arrested, despite how calmly the guards were treating everyone there.

I kept thinking about drones, that they'd fly a whole bunch of them at once in the hopes that if they got shot at, at least one would get through. Then it occurred to me we're talking about the US military, and they've more than likely got tech to just prevent them from taking off in the first place, let alone get close enough to be a threat.

That would be a fantastic idea if they didn't have those "guns" that disabled drones, or whatever the equivalent to those are. The ones that shoot certain electrical signals that send drones plummeting without contact? That would be loss of a beautiful drone and potential footage, plus they would likely still arrest whoever flew the drone through the perimeter since it's still technically breaching the perimeter.

Yeah that's what I'm thinking, or some kind of EMF jammer that just prevents them from being operational in the first place. And yeah, if you throw a stone over the fence you're breaching it, so a drone would be all kinds of potential terror charges due to spying, state secrets and or projectile potential weaponry!

Didn't even think about jammers! Thankfully they didn't have that though or no one by the gate would've been able to take any footage, at least based on my understanding. Exactly! So did these guys do anything or what? I noticed the replay of the video is 8 hours long lol. Anyone can give a conclusion of what happened?

Rsynced - September 20, 2019, 12:27 pm

So I guess this whole thing was a bust?

It was never meant to actually happen, but of course a bunch of peopoe got carried away and actually went to the surrounding sites (causing likely annoying extra vigilance from base patrols).

How funny would it be if it ended up turning into some Woodstock length festival - fuck they'd run the surrounding towns dry ?

This was a let down I guess.

Axe - September 20, 2019, 12:57 pm

Well that was a letdown. But I'd say its a good thing no one actually did anything lol

BeatMatch - September 20, 2019, 2:01 pm

Nothing happened, this what happens when people get carried away and have no leadership. It honestly reminds me of lost sheep and no shepherd ?

dragonHarem - September 20, 2019, 2:34 pm

i hoped someone will get shot

only stupid peple wud go there

Blogger - September 20, 2019, 2:46 pm

I skimmed through the video but there was nothing of value. Meh.
