Thread: \$1,000/day with Shopify

Kavalli † - September 23, 2019, 5:13 pm

Just a little motivation post for everybody who's strugglin. This was a brand spankin new store. Pure profit (apart from actually product cost) because my ads aren't even approved yet. This is all from an email blast. Honestly, i didn't expect it to do this well, but I think this will be a half a million dollar store once my ads start running and i start collecting data.

I've been in this game since way before dropshipping was even popular so i know the ins and outs of this stuff.

The only advice I can give you guys is trial and error. for the 10-15 stores that I've had a lot of success with in the past 5 years, I've created 150 stores that have failed and each one of them taught me something new.

P.S No, i'm not trying to sell a course, no im not trying to sell an ebook. I will never post any sales threads on this forum. This is just my childhood forum, and i like to come here and post every once in a while in my free time.

Great work man! I see only 8 orders so you must be selling a really nice product eh :P I wish I knew.

Lindros - September 23, 2019, 5:46 pm

Man that is awesome, do you do this full time?

James Burnham - September 23, 2019, 5:48 pm

How do you blast emails? What is the best way to go about blasting emails from bought lists?

I'm also doing Shopify again recently. I've been consistently increasing my revenue and profit and would love to connect with you. Do you have Discord or Skype?

yea I find it's alot easier to sell more expensive products, rather than a bunch of $10 stuff :)

(Sep 23, 2019 05:46 PM)ZietzSeV Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Man that is awesome, do you do this full time? Thanks man, no I don't do this full time. I've been hitting about $90k/100k a year just off of shopify for the past 4-5 years (profit), but I have another (offline) business that takes a majority of my time.

Really Shopify doesn't take a lot of time once you get the gist of it. Just find really good products, test it out, collect data and if it's successful then I have someone else fulfill my orders.

I believe I know how this is, but if all that is pure profit, your cost per item must be well over $100 .

Did you use email acquisition, or these were your subscribers?

Crypt - September 23, 2019, 11:04 pm

I really want to get into dropshipping but I'm nervous to lose a bunch of money.

yes sir, my AOV is $100+. I've been transitioning into more high ticket products because you can get a good profiting ROI alot easier (if your advertising is right). The emails were just subscribers from my previous shopify stores that were in a similar industry.

You shouldn't get into it then bro. Or at least only invest money that you're willing to lose because for me to get to where I am today... I've lost well over $20,000. That was my learning curve and of course it was in the span of years, but ultimately it pays off. I've never been the type to listen to other people, i did all my own trial and error and test runs. Don't be like me, do a lot of research before you start so you can minimize losses :)

Yeah, I was just talking to someone that other day that does drop shipping and he lost thousands before he started to make profit.

8 orders 1k, you're saying pure profit while yet product costs still have to be subtracted. What am i missing here? Whats your product cost if you dont mind me asking? Anyways keep up the sales man.

tjena leif - September 25, 2019, 12:46 pm

Hello money giants, do you think there's any chance I could survive with 1 try I will pay $5 every day for facebook ads and $25 every month for the Shopify plan (I think it was 25 can't remember)

Can anyone of you pm me a product I should start with selling and if you know any good people that can help me setup my Shopify or you yourself you would make my day.

TheChaosKiller - September 25, 2019, 12:48 pm

By pure profit i meant it's coming from organic traffic, not paid ads. I do still have a product cost. My profit margin is 80% in this case, 20% goes to supplying the actual product to the customer.

Of course my profit margins gonna decrease once my Facebook Ads get approved and start running.

UnpredictableLegacy - September 26, 2019, 9:04 am

How much of this is profit mate. Sounds really well

Best of luck boss.

I use ActiveCampaign for my email marketing :)

Hey man, 80% of this is profit for me. 20% goes to product cost/delivery. Usually my profit margins are alot lowing (20%-40%) when I run paid traffic because i have to take into account my product cost, AND my ad cost, but the $1k I made that day was purely from an email blast so...80% profit.

Thanks boss, don't be fooled though. Its only 80% because i'm not running paid ads yet. I'll be lucky to have 40% margins once my ads start. Probably around 30% if my ads even work.

I am interested in this. I have plenty capital and cashflow to put into this as a side gig/hobby project and a lot of experience in fintech/webdev/checkouts. Ecommerce I have read a lot about, just never acted on any of my ideas.

Did you email blast customers from previous stores mailing list or buy scraped emails to blast buyers?

Thanks

I don't buy lists so I have no idea. The list that I sent the blast to was from a previous store of mine that was in a similar niche :)

Got my answer and it's not what you said he uses precious stores mailing lists

Ty tho

Any tips or could I connect with you somewhere? I've been wanting to get into shopify again and talking to someone thats mastered it would be a great boost.

Thanks and congrats.
