Thread: Clickbank | Affiliate Marketing

I have some decent experience with social media marketing. Instagram specifically. Is Clickbank something still worth getting into? They pay quite a lot per sale. Just wondering if anyone is earning a decent amount from this.

Clickbank is decent, but hard to make sales in my opinion doing it on online products.

clickbank is fantastic, wide variety of niches, etc. Not any harder to make sales than anything else and commissions are usually in 70% range. Personally, I would stay away from the make money niche as most of those products are complete trash and you'll get a ton of refunds. But other niches, you should be okay as long as you stick to the good products, look for higher gravity score, good looking legit sales pages, products and you can sort by recurring commissions as well.

Good luck!

Umm.. I was, but not currently. I was selling shitty Make money products and refunds started to rack up and ended up with a pretty large neg balance and they shut my account down. Thats why I say stay away from that niche.. :-).

But dude, there are many 6 fig and even some 7 fig clickbank affiliates.

Yea dude I saw many people making tons of money with this. It's a little harder to set up than I thought lol. But I've been working on my landing page, IG and FB for the last couple of days. I see that Youtube is another route but that seems extremely saturated.

Im also interested in affiliate marketing, but idk if clickbank is the best choice for a newbie like me, there must be another alternatives, amazon associate seems saturated and low-profit.

If it's easy to say "oh that's a scam" then don't promote it on social media. Your accs will suffer from reports. Maybe when you have a blog that has a high rank on google you can get away with promoting magic pills, but with social media you must be more careful.

Bing ads is really good actually for CB products. of course landing page, collect emails is best for long term profits, but I've had success direct linking as well.

Yes it's still working.

Just look at the average $/product. The heavier the number the better!

I've been working on a fitness IG page. Seems like a good way to get some traffic.

I was thinking of fb/google ads as well.
