

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Lying on Contract Disputes?

DamienVC - October 1, 2019, 4:40 am

(Not biased because of my scam report on him, but its a general question)

So I've noticed this:

<https://hackforums.net/contracts.php?action=disputes&uid=1844209>

About my report, the user went through the effort of explaining it for hours and hours with screenshots, screencaps/records, explaining everything, etc., and said he couldn't go first due to expenses involved in creation. So yeah, I think its no big deal and send him the funds, but then again something as mere as $75 is a lot for worthless folks

I noticed there were disputes on him, yes, BUT on all Contract Disputes, the user responded with lies which make it seem like the issue has been resolved. Now due to the inactivity of users, some disputes tend to be "Open" as well, so I assume it was all sorted out.

Alternatively there is nothing officially linking a Contract Dispute with its respective Deal Dispute thread. (unless you manually open up the user's threads, and find the thread). My suggestion is having those interlinked for looking up and confirming such cases.

Similarly, he opened disputes on the users who he scammed, and added notes saying "already delivered", etc etc. I've noticed he did the same after scamming me too.

Wouldnt the scammer opening a dispute on the victim (scammed), be an "Invalid" deal dispute technically?