Thread: Who lives in California?

Mr. Robot - October 10, 2019, 4:17 am

Who lives there, how bad is it really? Wanting to hear some first hand responses.

PR1V473 - October 10, 2019, 4:37 am

I don't but I would move there in a hear beat from Europe.

SIM-4398566 - October 10, 2019, 5:07 am

Not from California but why would it be bad?

I think because of burnings happening since last month.

here's the current fire map:

Not just the burning - the homelessness, the fact almost every news outlet is reporting on the drug crisis and shitting on streets + disease.

Reminds me of the South Park episode.

California..

is nice to the homeless

Californ-ya-ya

All bad jokes aside, I heard a lot about it but I never been there.

Except from the burnings, the water supply is not much as I heard. People aren't allowed to wash their cars with water, may not use the water sprinklers unnecessary, and such things. Not sure if it's true, people can say it all really. Would love to hear from it from a HF member too!

I've been and you do see a lot of homeless people in the street, the prices to live there are insane too....

SIM-3257834 - October 10, 2019, 7:49 am

I've lived there for most of my life, there's homeless camps on the streets in certain parts of the city. I'm talking about hundreds of homeless and trash scatter bellow over passes. You can thank the liberal government for allowing citizens to be robbed by hood trash and crack heads. I know for a fact if someone breaks into my home and I kill them, I'll be spending the week at a local jail. It's okay HF members will defend these criminals because of society.

Never had issues with any of these issues, except the Cal Fire last November that burned the entire city of Paradise. My university was the next city over and canceled classes for 2 weeks.

But yeah, the only thing affecting people I know atm is the black out. Lol fuck pg&e flavoral - October 10, 2019, 8:30 am

Interesting thread, i totally forgot about that situation...

TheRecklessZebra - October 10, 2019, 8:51 am

I don't live there but i have been there and have family there and every time i go it so nice but there is quite a few of homeless there. as for everything burning im nto sure haven't seen any of that.

Would you do a proper drive around ?

Lol. Then that would literally show you nothing seeing as the average price for a home in my neighborhood is $900k. California is an entire state with 30+ million people, it takes 10+ hrs to get from one end to the other. "Proper drive around".... the entire state? No thanks.

The fact of the matter is that at any major city in USA those issues you mentioned are prevalent. In Cali, New York, Florida, Illinois, etc... you cant generalize it to the entire state tho. Maybe the entire city. Like LA or Sacramento.
