Thread: Bitcoin addresses holding more than 1000 BTC

LayersOSImodel - October 12, 2019, 12:33 am

Here is a chart of addresses holding more than 1000 BTC since 2015.

People around you who don't have balls do buy BTC now will say that you've been lucky in 2 years.

becuz they bought when price was hella high :p

just kidding... don't really know, but in reality, this does not mean that the price is going to go up just because there are more holding and hoping xD

LoI, 1000 BTC is more than 8.000.000$, why so many rich people are investing more than 8 million $ on bitcoin ? because we are reaching soon the 21.000.000 bitcoins ? because the next bitcoin halving is coming ? or because an economic crisis is coming ?

whatever the reason, if so many rich people are investing in same time on bitcoin, people having money, power, real informations, its only because bitcoin is going up soon.

It's imho a lot of institutional holders who also create multiple wallets for security. There are a lot of Bitcoin and crypto related companies who need to have at least that much BTC to function and be part of the ecosystem.

Just because there are believers adding to their investment doesn't mean it's likely to go up.

Bitcoin can very well remain stagnant at 6-12k for a very long time. Mainstream adoption does not look like its coming soon at all.

There is still hope for Utility tokens out there though

A lot of exchanges also create multiple wallets also. Either way this is a win, there is a high chance there are actually more users with over 10,000 at these prices.

This clearly indicates that JP Morgan is a liar.

Just look at the date of when he fear-mongers.

This doesn't show what you think it does.

Most of the addresses are institutional money.

By putting the two side by side he clearly wants to compare the accumulation with the price spikes. But nowadays, multiple institutions are forced to hold thousands in crypto.
