Thread: Over 200GB of crap in Temp folder?

Leroy Jethro Gibbs - October 23, 2019, 6:04 pm

So I finally got around to cleaning a problematic computer at work. I wanted to upgrade to an SSD and noticed a shit ton of storage just full. I didn't see any obvious programs in downloads or something like that to take up the space. I decided to use CCleaner to see if anything extra was left over. Mind you this computer hasn't been cleaned since its deployment back in 2011. Needless to say, I have for the first time discovered over 200GB of crap SO FAR, I cancelled it midway, in the temp folder. I ended up cloning to the SSD after the removal of the first 100GB of crap. Now I'm finishing it up since the SSD is so much faster than the old hard drive we had in there.

So my question to you is simple, what is the largest amount of free'd up storage you have had cleaned by CCleaner? Did you ever have anything over 100GB of crap in a TEMP folder?

Wowzers, that is a lot of crap, what OS is this? (Win 7 I am guessing) CCleaner is used in most workplaces which I have been in or at.

Quick update, it found another 125gb of crap lmao

I keep my computers clean mostly I use to let my computer have so much shit build up in the temp folders and download folder and now I just keep whatever I need. And throw out the rest. I think the most I have ever had to clean out with cc cleaner is about 400gb on one of my old 4 tb hard drives. Sad to say that drive died 2 months ago... Thank god for drive recovery.

The most I have ever had was like 1.3 GB. I can only imagine 200... That is insane.

I don't use ccleaner, I just use disk clean up and delete crap off the temp drive once a week. Nothing more than 3gb.

I thought 2GB was a lot... 200GB are ridiculous man.
