Posting to participate.

Chess I guess...

Nishikuchi - October 31, 2019, 4:39 pm

I guess I'll be number 2 for posting or technically 3. Posting to enter m8 or to find thread later. Happy Halloween. Not sure what a good contest would be as everyone keeps reusing the common ones and there isn't much to do halloween wise.

i could only think of this one so here i go

"The last man on Earth sat alone in a room. There was a knock on the door."

Good luck to me

Would you prefer living in a big mansion and when you sneeze someone wishes you to be healthy or would you prefer living in a small apartment full of people you hate?

goodluck to evreyone!

Posting to enter, really neat idea.

Happy late Halloween hope it was good.

Scary short story, the sun has a finite lifespan and when it's gone everything we know will become ice. (Luckily this could take billions of years ^_^)

Kills - November 3, 2019, 1:42 pm

It all started on the 14th night of march, the night of my parents' 20th wedding anniversary.

It was a wonderful, sunny day, if memory serves. Surprisingly warm for before the beginning of spring. The beautiful weather was perfect for the atmosphere of the day—being married for twenty years is obviously a momentous occasion, so my parents had booked a table at our favorite Italian restaurant.

Of course, this was a formal occasion, so I had my best suit on. It was 5:33, and I was just straightening my tie when my phone went off—I'd received a message. That's strange, I thought, that never happens. I checked the message: It was from my mum. It was quite a jumble of numbers and letters, but through the vocabulary stew I could make out the legible phrase: "Please help me." It should go without saying that this worried me greatly, so I immediately replied, "Are you okay?" Just as instantly, I got another text which read, "Oops. Pocket text!" I signed with all the relief I had and continued to prepare myself.

A few minutes later, I received yet another message, this time from my dad. I checked the text, and once again it was a massive mixture of letters and numbers, with the phrase, "Please help me" concealed within. Creepy though this was, my dad was always a joker, so I presumed he was just joking around, until I was sent another text saying, "Oops. Pocket text!" Now this sparked panic. Pure, unmistakeable panic. Exactly half a minute passed when I received the exact same message from my sister. This could not be coincidental. It just couldn't.

In a state of sheer anxiety, I started to run to the restaurant. I made it about a quarter of the way before I was stopped by a police officer. "Main road's closed," he said, "Huge car crash." This was the exact moment I realized just what had happened. I demanded to see the wreckage, a request I'm surprised was allowed. When I got there, it wasn't the remnants of the car that caught my eye, not the flames billowing from the destroyed vehicle. No, I was horrified to see the lifeless corpses of my mother, father and sister. I asked for the estimated time of their deaths—all three of them were killed instantly by the collision at 5:32.
