Thread: Manufacturing helicopters from a milk carton

Rsynced - November 5, 2019, 11:48 am

Found this random video on youtube, pretty cool DIY, only if they would fly... lol

Time to save up a whole year of milk cartons.
Or you can go dumpster diving and find cartons there.

Not sure if that would work out, if there is nearly no wind, maybe yeah but it would be very unstable in my opinion.

It would be a cool project to follow if someone would want to take the challenge and make one.

Make a big project size of a real helicopter, now that you're adult.

Oh boy lol, I'm unfortunately not a mechanical engineer. I am just trying to learn to code all of the ideas in my head.

This person is a slave child laborer, it's the companies branding, j/k IDK...lol

EDIT: Not trying to make child labor jokes here, maybe gone to far... just the first thing that came to my mind.

Damn people get creative with anything haha.

Working on real helicopters that fly is pretty cool too ;)

Uploading on my phone is a pain in the ass.

How about now?

Lindros - November 5, 2019, 12:48 pm

There was some kid on Youtube that used to make guns out of paper machete that literally could fire real bullets, that he also made. It was the craziest shit I've ever seen.

Looks cool indeed. I remember when I was a kid there were constructor kits similar to this thing, you were able to create planes and helicopters with wooden sticks and glue that actually fly.
