I paid $1500 for his mentorship. The mentorship got previously covered already. Now I'm making more than what the mentorship cost me on a daily basis. Pretty funny. There's also the cost of goods which is about $2500.

Once you started getting sales did you use your own money to purchase your product upfront or did you wait for the money to arrive in your bank account and then use it to buy the products?

You don't wait much, maximum one week or so, but when you start getting orders everyday, you get paid daily.

Btw, OP That is really awesome! You inspire me big time. ?

You're taking home only 30%? You should look into maximizing that around the 50-60% margin.

Are you spending enough time and resources behind your product research?

Lmao 50~60%? He's doing Drop Shipping impossible to get 50~60% profit margin, he has a good profit margin some people struggle to get more than 25%.
