Thread: Missing Phone Syndrome

DNA - November 11, 2019, 10:28 am

I don't know if it's just me, I've dubbed it "Missing Phone Syndrome", where you are so used to feeling your phone vibrate in your pocket that when you don't have your phone, you still feel the vibrations...

Surely it's not just me??

CH00k - November 11, 2019, 10:37 am

Nah, not really. Never had this.

When I go somewhere, I check my pockets but I'm not a phone addict and sometimes I don't even have phone with myself.

I get literally no notification and this never really bothered me tbh but I can imagine someone just hears the bell or his brain makes him think and he has to check.

Yeah I get that a lot jelly. Weird how that happens.

1337GAMER - November 11, 2019, 10:39 am

Dude, DNA this happens to me about 5+ times a day. It drives me nuts because I would swear on anything that I felt it vibrate!

duck - November 11, 2019, 10:41 am

I don't think I ever had this as I don't keep my phone in pocket rather in my bag and in airplane mode although I had hallucinations once about my phone making the notification noise.

This happened mote frequently for me without a phome but has happened to me with a phone in my pocket as well.

Wouldn't call it a hallucination, I've heard mine ring for a text once when it wasn't ringing, call it a side effect from habitual use?

NebulousJay - November 11, 2019, 12:41 pm

This is a pretty well documented phenomena. I experience it occasionally too.

Lol I ain't no boomer, Gen Y

Pow3r - November 11, 2019, 12:53 pm

I've never been so attached to my phone to experience this. Sounds a little weird though for sure.

Ravioli - November 11, 2019, 4:20 pm

I don't know about the vibration part, but the phone in pocket part for sure.

SIM-3257834 - November 11, 2019, 4:23 pm

No one ever contacts me and if they do it's normally something bad. So I don't have this issue considering anytime I am contacted it's for something stupid or a mass call back.

This is 90 percent of HF user base here.

I always think my work phone is vibrating but it isn't. And I leave it on sound all the time anyway

SIM-1349466 - November 11, 2019, 11:39 pm

Can't relate. My phone is 100% silent (no vibrate) all the time.

Takehito Morokuzu - November 11, 2019, 11:52 pm

This happens to me occasionally, not very often though. Sometimes I will hear a beep or vibration and when I check my phone nothing is there. I can never figure out if I imagined it or if its a bug on my smartphone.

CyberError - November 12, 2019, 12:01 am yup happens with me all the time , its started when i newly got into relationship

flavoral - November 12, 2019, 1:09 am

Yeah i don't have it. I've put my phone on silent + DoNotDisturb since the day i got it gday mate - November 12, 2019, 3:54 am

Have had this happen a few times. Just so use to having my phone in my right pocket
