Done. Read the message carefully.

Sorry for the question but I'm wondering if I were to use it on my own computer as a test, is there anyway for me to remove it?

I've tested this on avast, its not detecting the builder as a virus/malware at the very least. I want to test it on my other computer.

Also is there a more in depth explanation on what each does?

For an example whats the difference between delay and sending interval?

I tried this on my computer and tested the email, it says it works but I havent received anything after setting the "sending interval" into 60 m/s

If you set to 60, you will wait for 1 hour before you receive logs.

So it'll be a log every hour right? But its been 6 hours and I havent received a single log and I'm sure the infected laptop is connected to the internet and online.

I tested it on a windows 10 laptop with a mcafee, its possible that mcafee is preventing it from sending the log but when I full scan the laptop using mcafee, it didnt detect the keylogger at all. I'll give the log a try again with an old laptop without any antivirus.

Also for my previous question, is it possible to remove it or stop the keylogger once its installed?

Works fine and recommended.

Things to add:

1. Cure
2. Stealer (for major browsers)
3. Scanner (maybe)

Things to fix:

1. Icon changer
2. Process name (Should be same with Title or filename and not some randomly generated name)

Keylogger works well and machine information displays correctly. Output scanned on antiscan.me gives a score of 8/26 most times.

Thanks for a nice piece.

Finally! a great feedback, this is what i want from all this people. after 11 pages of this thread, you are the only one who give feedback. thank you. on the things to add, cure is like scanner right? i may release cure for 1.2, this current version. the cure for the new version will be different because i use a different method.

icon changer might broke because of the update i made, i will check on it. the random filename was purposely made, i will change it in the next version, heres the screenshot.

Of course everyone does. Cant you just analyze the tools on your own? because I can, and It doesnt send logs to the TS.

TS doesnt care about our Clay Davis.

Hey! It's great seeing a member contributing to the forum free of cost/for research purposes! I have a couple questions, bear with me I'm relatively new, but would this keylogger work against a target using MacOS? And do you plan on rolling out a pass recov. feature in the future? I would like to try out this keylogger, as I have little experience and would like to get my toes wet before I go on to purchase something or try coding my own. Thank you in advance!

Im trying to lower the detection rate but change some vital code and push it to the server. The keylogger will not work for the meantime. If you receive a message, that means the keylogger is already working.

Update:

Stub has been updated. Fix the issue for not sending the logs.

Here's the new scan:

Kleenscan (8/31): https://kleenscan.com/scan_result/d39fabf7070124c20adc2c85ee96f9e8

Cyberscan (9/24): <https://cyberscan.org/results.php?id=s4HI0eQo8d>

Hi

I appreciate your share. It's nice to see clean looking free software on HF.

Would be nice to get the source though, so others can learn from you.

As long as we doesn't have it, some questions:

Which language is it programmed in?

Is it compatible with regular crypters?

Will you edit the thread when updated?

Why not posting the password publicly?

Regards Metamorphis

Lastly, the pass would be nice so I can take a look.

I'd like to try it for myself first if you're able to send me the password. I'm interested to see if the password recovery works on my test PC. I'm also a developer and know the time/effort that goes into projects like these. Please give me an hour or two to try it out.

Jk, i dont believe someone saying they will donate. Look at the page, its 48 pages and only one person donates.
Anyway, i already give you the password and enjoy.
