Thread: A hilarious netflix scam attempt

Xamarin - November 24, 2019, 4:51 pm

This is what I got to my hotmail e-mail:

Spoiler (Click to View)

<http://prntscr.com/q1j1o3>

I don't know about you guys, but when I saw this, I almost fell from my chair laughing. The guy that created this, is SOOO BAAADD. I mean, this is not the first time that someone tries to SE me, but this is on another level ... I mean there is NOTHING right with this scam attempt, everything is wrong. From the grammar of every sentence, up to the e-mail of the sender, and the German words (which btw I don't understand why he putted them).

Btw, if you follow the link, you get redirected to this page:

Spoiler (Click to View)

<http://prntscr.com/q1j22s>

After filling the login screen with some garbage data, of course it shows a form to input there all the payment information:

The guy even messed the validation code for the last form (with card information) and it never validates, even if you put data that could be considered accurate. Whatever.

I wanted to share this, and I hope you found it as entertaining as I did!

Your images won't load.

I don't even entertain spam mails.

lol - November 24, 2019, 5:18 pm

Re-upload your pics so I can "laugh".

Wait, what ? I updated the original post and I removed the img tags and left only the urls in there. Can you see them now ?

Well, usually I don't enjoy them either, but this time the result was too bad for me to not notice and laugh with the attempt.

Lightshot doesn't allow direct images anymore. Shit's annoying. Just found that out today actually.

Ohhh I didn't have a clue. I could still see them directly though. I don't know.

Anyways, I updated the post with the original lightshot links, so now they should be visible.

Man .. I swear, I haven't laughed at any single spam e-mail that I ever got (and I get a lot, especially on my "throw away" ones). But the language as well as the general shape of the message (header, sender, quality of images) is so BAAAD that made my eyes bleeding and my stomach hurt from laughing. I don't know why I found it so funny, but I did ?

LOL, dumbass. Thinks they're smart. I feel sorry for them.

Thanks for sharing it with us ? ? ?

I ain't tryna bully you or nothing but this wasn't hilarious at all.

I rate it 0 out of Natas

Don't worry, I am not getting bullied that easily, and you did not hurt my feelings. I was just the one that I found it funny, and I thought that I should share it so that other may find it funny as well. Nothing more, nothing less. As for the "joke" with Natas, I 'll assume it's an inside one which I don't get.

I don't remember who posted that thread but he was selling that exact thing.

That spam isn't aimed at you, it's aimed for the lowest hanging fruit. You'd be surprised at how many people fall for some very obvious spam emails.

Lmao, new rating system aye?

Edit. That domain lmao

Cooligan - November 24, 2019, 7:56 pm

If you put `[img][img]` tags around your image link it will actually show the image in the spoiler rather than making members click a link, just as a heads up. :)

SIM-3257834 - November 24, 2019, 8:18 pm

Rather than uploading this shit. Report the domain to the register and the host. Do something about it, a simple whois will provide all the information you need and contacts. I've taken down a few skid pages with this method.

Yes of course, but you know, at least if I open any other of the hundreds spam emails, I usually see a decent work. Maybe some small grammatical errors in "its" and "it's" and stuff like that. But this one, was as bad as it could ever get!

Thank you for your comment, but this doesn't work with lightshot url's unfortunately. Nevertheless I will change my screenshot software, so that I can be able to do it :)

You think so ? Well ... maybe I have misunderstood the guy ?

Lorem Ipsum - November 25, 2019, 1:32 am

Two things made me laugh thanks to this thread.

1. 'The Netflix Team' as regards in the email
2. The way you spelled 'Amstardam' instead of 'Amsterdam'

I must say - you guys are making my day today at HF haha I feel bad for the people who are ignorant enough to actually believe such a bad written email asking for login credentials.

Mr. Robot - November 25, 2019, 1:34 am

Ugh why do people report shit like this, I was going to find the stored details.

I notice everything hahaha. I like your Color Picker extension too. Useful tool for web design and such things.
