Quote:A man has been shot dead by police on London Bridge after several people were stabbed in what the Metropolitan Police called a "terror incident".

Video shows a man, apparently the suspect, grappling with members of the public on the ground. As he tries to get up he appears to be hit by gunfire and collapses on the ground.

A man in a suit and jacket could be seen backing away from the man having taken a large knife. After at least two shots are heard, passengers can be heard screaming, with one shouting: "What the f, they've killed him."

Full story not yet known, it's being treated as terror related. The man who was shot attacked people with a knife, you can see in the video someone holding the knife who took it from him as others struggled with him. I think he possibly had something else, like a suicide vest on or a bomb as he was shot while on the ground and not actually attacking anyone at that moment, although this is just a theory, we will know the full story soon, Police don't operate in the UK like this usually and for them to shoot someone like that there is usually very good reason, if the person didn't have anything else and wasn't attacking, I think the Police officer who shot him will be doing some prison time for that, although in my opinion, he deserved to be shot if he was out to kill and attack innocent people.

Just the usual annual London terrorist attack. He wasn't a very good terrorist, he didn't kill anybody and ended up dead :-)

Would hate to live in a country where I couldn't protect myself.

FFS two people died. Sorta good the police shot him dead but also a shame they didn't shoot him in the spine so he was left to live his pointless life in prison as a paraplegic :-)

I was working about 30 mins away from London Bridge. Glad I didn't decide to go sight seeing..

It's pretty sad how often things similar to this happen around the world. Too many people are raised around this stuff and the tendency for violence seems to be spreading like a plague.

The world's too fucking soft. It's political correctness gone absolutely mad.

Society is literally obsessed with equality. If you're clinically obese, that's okay because we should promote that on TV to keep the cake eaters happy..!? You should be deeply concerned about your health and we shouldn't promote this in order for weight acceptance. People are offended by absolutely everything and it rages me to think that we're morphing society into a collection of fucking tender generation z softies that are covered in cotton wool.

How many terrorist attacks could have been prevented if only the government acted on information instead of waiting for something to happen? MI5 knew about Salman Abedi (Manchester bomber) for fucking months and didn't act on it.

It's more of a concern to not offend people on religion/race than potentially avoid tragedies.

Rant over.
