Upon 10 minutes of research into their facebook page, it's not legit.

that's not even the same offer?

it must be common to just shoot down every new method that comes out?

So far people seem pretty hostile for free money methods... I don't get that. These are legit offers from major affiliate networks.

What?

It's from clicking "facebook" then "reviews" it's the company, doesn't matter what offer it is.

I'd like to get this, thanks!

What's with the spam link? And why does it need access to my Google drive?

hahahaha :D

it's a legit offer from trusted affiliate network. Order your free stuff and then sue them if it doesn't show up!

Can't sue them when in the fine print it states there's a chance to receive the products upon submitting your data.

yet you say its not legit.

free is free man, even if its a chance.

I've won alot of stuff in my day, got a $25 starbucks card on a fb group. there's cash to be made man, i dont think it hurts trading a bs email u dont check anyways for a chance to win $70 worth of dove products?

dont really understand your beef with it tbh. it's perfectly legit, but it's scammy looking- i'll give you that. I have no control over design decisions for affiliate network landing pages, but these offers are vetted by the network - as far as I understand it, they aren't allowed to promote fishy links. ?
