Thread: [Cryp \[UID 4098852\] Spitting out blatant lies, while looking like a dumbass](#)

vZen - December 16, 2019, 4:26 pm

Hello everyone, this is just a followup on the community alert made by user Cryp
<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=4098852>

2 Days ago I posted a sales thread in making, asking for trusted members of the community to test out the scripts quality on bustadice, while specifying that the recommended budget for running the scrip is 10k bits (70$)

One of the users who aksed for a vouch copy was Cryp, he said and I quote "I'm able to complete a vouch copy. Lmk."

Which for any sane person would mean that he has the required funds and is willing to test the script out.

We started chatting over discord: f

Full convo: <https://imgur.com/a/Rw8D5Hp>

Pictures are missaligned, but I'm sure you'll be able to make out the timeline.

To make things further clear, bustadice's script engine is sandboxed, so in no way shape or form can his funds be stolen from him, which is just a blatant lie in order to discredit my whole thread and the whole purpose behind it.

In order to have full transparency with everyone, showing what a fool and a lying low quality member he is

I'll make the script free

Which you will be able to get via the following link.

<https://pastebin.com/fzSDvzuq>

Be caucious when dealing with Cryp in further arrangements, as he's just another lying pleb tryharding to look good.

I don't like you.

You got mad at me for not testing the script untill we had a contract.

However this is true, scripts in both bustadice and bustabit are iframed or as OP said, sandboxed.

May I ask why you think I wouldn't just vouch if it was a legit script instead of saying nice scam? You're a multi with 4 matching ips, joined less than a month ago and any reputable user can confirm you sent me a script which is a btc address replacer for the deposit address.

All proof is here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6033349>

Which OP for some reason has not responded to :thinking:

Well you're fucked Magaddino got the script before you did.

Also I told you to paste it inside the bustadice script window, which throws any kind of stealing attempt out of the window, along with any little bit of credibility you had before this reply.

Also the string you posted is contained within the script, dumbass.

"replace" doesn't make it a stealer try harder.

We didn't create a contract for a vouch, you can't open a comm alert since I did not vouch when I am not bound via contract, I got a discord message with a file. Does not mean I have to vouch.

Nonetheless, it doesn't matter. You sent me a scam script and I'm sure you are sending different scripts depending on who the user is.

To confirm it's a fucking scam? It wasn't a scam, you just saw the format and thought it was. You're stupid and I hope no one ever wastes a vouch copy on you again.

Dotexe - December 16, 2019, 4:50 pm

You should learn some networking before trying to make an argument, I can basically login with 30 unique Login IP's and still have no more than 1 account, yes matching 3 records and brand new account looks sketchy, that doesn't mean its true. I've seen people being inactive for over 4 years and their trust scan shows they're matching with another account, but it's not true. Not gonna mention whos account was

I overestimated you. IQ of 2

Just because he says you need to deposit $70..... doesn't.... mean you have to.... you know you can deposit $1 right? or hell, you don't even need to deposit anything, all you have to do is run the script and see if it pops up with a deposit address that is different to your normal one.

Cryp jumped the gun on his alert by assuming a very common function can only be used maliciously. The replace function is commonly used and its existence in the script alone can not determine whether or not the script is malicious. A bigger snippet of the code that Cryp received can allow us to verify whether or not it's usage is malicious or legitimate.

You have the whole script posted in the pastebin, furthermore a bustadice script can't be a stealer because of the sandboxed engine.

Unless he edited the code, the scripts are the same, which just shows how far he's ready to go, and yet again his attempts are futile as a sandboxed script can't steal funds. I'll investigate right now.

OP tried to send me his script too, before the whole sales thread

It's encoded not encrypted. Encryption assumes you have to have a key to decrypt it and that is not the case.

It's almost completely obfuscated which prevents a unintelligible user from analyzing functionality at a simple glance.

Whatever boy

Why this is your argument I have no clue.

Vpns are not allowed on hf

This is one of many things which I pointed out and simply an added factor, which you agreed it was sketchy lmfao.

since when are vpns not allowed on hf ?

(Dec 16, 2019 06:22 PM)BV1 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Cryp jumped the gun on his alert by assuming a very common function can only be used maliciously. The replace function is commonly used and its existence in the script alone can not determine whether or not the script is malicious. A bigger snippet of the code that Cryp received can allow us to verify whether or not it's usage is malicious or legitimate.

Don't know what kind of script or lang, whatever.
Doesn't replace have a bunch of uses?
It could be as simple as replacing text somewhere internally or display, idk exactly what i'm talking about not gonna pretend like I do, I only code in ruby.

Anyways. Just thought I'd mention that

Imagine wanting to sit at a keyboard and typing out oBfUsCaTiOn

The irony is in the fact that you can sit in front of a computer and type out this ridiculous post. I want to, I have time for it and I suggest you keep quiet before you make yourself look more inept.

You have no idea what language it's in so any opinion you have is null and void.

By the way, it's JavaScript and it is obfuscated which, if you had any amount of skill in programming, is not synonymous to encryption and is used primarily to conceal the purpose of code and deter reverse engineering.

Baboon, contracts are required at every deal on HF, also for vouch vopies else you can get banned for not using them and he didn't want a contract so i refused to test until there was a contract.

Lying prick, it's not that I didn't want the contract, it's the fact that Omni didn't unbann me from using the contract system at the time.
so suck a dick.

Stating facts:

The code depends on data and code only provided by the Bustabit API and sandbox and, as such, is not valid JavaScript independently.

I can confirm that the script does not and can not access any session data from Bustabit because the session cookie is stored on the licensing.gaming-curaçao.com subdomain and is a cross-site resource. Bustadice does not seem to store any other cookie data including Bitcoin addresses and as such does not require informed consent and as such you receive no GDPR pop-up requesting it.

The replace function appears to be a part of the deobfuscation and uses the base64 encoded regular expression `"*(?:_0x(?:[a-f0-9]){4,6}|(?:\b\d)[a-z0-9]{1,4}|(?:\b\d))"` which matches a sequence of lowercase alphanumeric characters beginning with `"_0x"` that are either 4 to 6 characters in length OR a sequence of lowercase alphanumeric characters between 1 and 4 characters in length. The script feeds the code back into itself and uses the replace function `('replace')`, which uses the regular expressions `"(?:^|;|x20)"` and `"/[. $? * | { } ( ) [ ] V + ^ ]/g, '$1' += ([^;]*)"`, to remove symbols surrounding these sequences by substituting them with nothing `("")` to later use a bitmask and bitshift operation to convert them into the valid hexadecimal character sequences.

I do not believe this code has any capability or functionality to replace any Bitcoin address found anywhere. You may use it at your own risk as gambling is inherently risky.
