So I recently found out that I can connect the PS4 controller wireless to my cell phone and desktop via bluetooth.

This is new to me I did not know it was an option I find it to be pretty cool.

Did anyone else know this?, also because it is obvious I am not up with the times let me know of any other cool hidden things.

I found out about this when a friend told me that he had won money competing in a mobile only cup on fortnite, he simply hooked up his controller to his mobile phone and it registred it as a touch input and he was thus easily able to outplay the mobile players and take home some money, needless to say i was very surprised that this was possible.

Yea I just hope this continues into next gen console controllers because if I would of know this I would of started playing more mobile games.

I just found that out at the beginning of this year but I did it with an Xbox controller. It's interesting how there's little simple things we had no clue about.
