Thread: [\[2020\] Snapfame, a hub of newly-designed free \(for now!\) Snapchat tools](#)

New to the forum, but I'm using a new approach to attempt to fill the void in the Snapchat community for auto-adding as well as auto-messaging. I see a lot of emphasis on hiring people to automatically message, and this potentially makes the process simpler.

Of course, I'm giving these tools away for free - but I am planning on MUCH more robust tools in the future that will be able to do everything out of the box. If you're an influencer, I run Snapfa [dot] me, and am able to help work with you to increase your following, fast.

(Future: sfs network, monetise your Snapchat story through bulk shoutout network, more tools, easier integration on all systems)

Let me know what y'all think Hehe open to feedback and criticism, just want to help improve the interest in the area.

Very cool tools. Snapchats bots go for a lot of money on the market.

This sounds amazing, I've been needing this for years.

If you could send me a copy that would be awesome!

Hey all! Glad to see that the community wants this type of application. Makes me feel more confident about working on it more.

So the entire base of the app is all highlighted in Snapfame (website - Google "snapfa.me"), but I am not confident enough with the servicing of a plethora of people with the application until I add this last feature to the automatic adder, so I will be streaming as I edit the code/ add the update soon on my YouTube account (El Jeko). You can find all the tools there, or checking the website I linked to above.

As for the individual who said "Very cool tools. Snapchats bots go for a lot of money on the market."
- should I then offer this as a service for people? As the implementation is a bit awkward and I could work with larger people to automate their workflow - can anyone give me an idea of the pricing?
