Thread: Are you native english speaker?

nicemanforlife - January 7, 2020, 1:33 pm

I am not native english speaker, I live in europe

I know english from games

? ? ? ? ?

What about you?

Honestly im not working

But if employer saw my english skillz

He would get banana smile

And I would get a job

I dream about traveling to America (scared of patologic cops and cops system Though) and getting to work in popular programmer company that even folk in my country know

echochamber - January 7, 2020, 1:46 pm

I am a native english speaker.

did you learn english from games or did you have a few lessons?

I had lessons in school but they never taught me anything.

at age of 17 i already knew english better than my teachers or at least i knew more words the truth is i did very poorly in school so any skill I learned was from computer and internet

My first english words and sentences were learned from multiplayer games (mmorpgs mainly) and then from websites and forums.

(in the end i learned more from gaming for few years than from spending half life in school :X :C :): ()

This is so true

Who decided teens need to learn to sau weird things like

The dog eats bread..or I would like to go gliding on Monday.

Things like languages are best learnt when you have to use them, like through games, or visiting a country.

exactly man! I learned english because it was useful for gaming and programming. if you want to code, english is a must. they teach us ton of useless things in school that we will forget in 2 months completely anyway LOL education system needs to be completely reworked

I think schools are trying to prepare you for every eventuality...

In my life I use my maths and science knowledge.

English- I think I learnt all the english I need for life by the end of primary school History/Geography-I did not hate it, but everything I learnt can be found on google

If I was ruler of the world, i would make education (language+maths+google skills)

Takehito Morokuzu - January 7, 2020, 2:07 pm

I am. And I agree, almost nobody at school did well at French at school. (including me). It just isn't a language that interested me or most other people, and the lessons were boring and didn't work very well IMO. I think what you said is true, the best way to learn a language is not in lessons, but in places you actually use it, in your case video games or forums. In the future I will try to learn a language, but I've been told its a difficult language to learn (I would like to learn Japanese). But I don't really have time for it nor is my mind ready for that at this time.

Chevy - January 7, 2020, 2:52 pm

English is my native language, yes. Born and raised in the USofA.

James Burnham - January 7, 2020, 2:55 pm

No, I am from Greece. I use english more than I use greek, but still not very fluent. I m sure I do a lot of grammar mistakes too

Grim - January 7, 2020, 2:59 pm

Yes i am. Although my grammar and use of words are often worse then non-native english speakers xD

Moxxi - January 7, 2020, 3:04 pm

English is the only language I know

Born and raised in the USA

Fish - January 7, 2020, 7:08 pm

Born and raised, in my blood

Muggsy - January 7, 2020, 10:47 pm

I only know English. Would be cool to learn another language but, just cant find the time to do so.

Nate - January 8, 2020, 3:26 am

Yup speak English, and mandarin

Django - January 8, 2020, 5:11 am

I was born and raised in Belgium, as a Flemish speaker, but my English is MUCH better than my "mother" tongue. I started teaching myself English at age 3 and haven't stopped since. I often catch myself thinking in English for months on end without ever even thinking in Dutch.

I just never bothered with keeping up with Flemish, it's a dead language really.

There's less than 10 million speakers in the world, so it's not crazy to hear that you haven't heard of it. It's the Belgian dialect of Dutch, kinda like fancy old Dutch, but retarded at the same time.

Zero - January 8, 2020, 5:45 am

No it's not. I am from Israel, but using mostly English to communicate unless I actually need to speak to a person on the streets.

Mullet Muscle - January 8, 2020, 5:47 am

Born and raised
I don't know any other language lol

bands - January 8, 2020, 6:05 am

English is my first language. Also fluent in Spanish because I thought it would be more useful

R E D M O N K E Y - January 8, 2020, 11:57 am

No , i'm from tunisia i speak french and english and arabic

Nyx - January 8, 2020, 12:04 pm

Lmao rest of the world knows at least two. You're pretty dumb bro

Aeowulf - January 8, 2020, 1:06 pm

From games... that's how I started learning bits of French. ?

Native speaker here.

Dr. Einyel - January 8, 2020, 1:59 pm

All I know of English is thanks to music, tv shows and just internet in general. I mainly speak Spanish.
