

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How to delete someones YouTube through copyright

Anon Help - January 8, 2020, 7:18 pm

How to delete or strike someone's channel

Flash7475 - January 9, 2020, 11:01 am

The only way to take down someone's channel is to mass report videos and have them taken down. For every video taken down they get a strike, 3 strikes and the channel gets deleted. So hypothetically if you were to take someone's channel down it would have to be with a bot to mass report videos from different IPs and accounts. I'm not sure how much reporting you would have to do since that's not publicly available information.

Taking it down through copyright is harder/easier depending on how you look at it. If it's legitimate copyright and I would suggest looking into what copyright entails, then you can report on that basis. I am not quite sure how you go about reporting if it is a different process since I personally haven't been in that situation.

If you're looking to copy strike them because you simply don't like them, it's not easy since you won't have any basis when they counter claim that it's not copyright. Plus I wouldn't recommend doing that because it's just a shitty thing to do.