This method is very simple and perfect for beginners and would be a great first project.

1. Create a job vacancies website. (The best and easiest theme for this is the Jobroller theme)
2. Create an AdSense account and indeed publisher account.
3. Add job vacancies to the site, simply copy and paste them from classifieds or other job sites. (I personally adjusted the code on the Jobroller theme so that it automatically showed jobs from indeed so I didn't have to keep adding job vacancies)
4. Place AdSense and indeed jobs using your publisher code on to your site.
5. Create a facebook account and join every job related group you can find and start posting jobs from your site into the groups.

That's it. Simple.

This will provide a steady income and your website will never be banned as it's relevant to the groups you're posting in.

Interesting but does AdSense even allow this kind of automated content? Before accepting our site they will review it and they also prefer aged sites.

I am not sure how advanced AdSense has gotten since I used it, but I was able to generate a little bit of money back when I first got into online monetizing as a kid like 8-9 years ago. And that was like $300 over the course of a month with it completely on autopilot but the times have changed now.

Yup, nowadays they won't let us monetize site/blog with automated content.

I want to try this. If somehow I will have a question regarding this method, can I contact you directly?

I'm also interested in this project. Although I wonder if it's worth a try
