

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Services similar to Upwork/Freelancer?

Django - January 13, 2020, 1:57 pm

Hey guys,

I'm hoping to move in with my gf by July, and I'll be needing some extra money to afford that. I'm going to be doing a full-time ethical hacking course at university, so I'll be needing all the money I can get my hands on. I've previously had a bit of success here and there on Upwork and Freelancer, where I worked as a data entry clerk, video game QA tester, blog writer, eBay listings, etc.

I live in Belgium, so some websites like mTurk don't even take applications from me, which limits who I can work for dramatically. Does anyone know of any sites that allow users from Belgium where you can earn a decent bit of money? $6 an hour won't be cutting it for me as living costs here are high.

Mycroft Holmes - January 15, 2020, 4:58 am

Well, I would recommend you to get a real job. Why not work at McDonalds? Base pay started at 12€ per hour, in Belgium.

Django - January 15, 2020, 5:09 am

(Jan 15, 2020 05:58 AM)Mycroft Holmes Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well, I would recommend you to get a real job. Why not work at McDonalds? Base pay started at 12€ per hour, in Belgium.

I'm 25 years old, with higher learning degrees. Why would I flip burgers?

Mycroft Holmes - January 15, 2020, 7:51 am

(Jan 15, 2020 06:09 AM)Django Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm 25 years old, with higher learning degrees. Why would I flip burgers?

For the same reason you juggling through 3 non-specialised short-term jobs and is begging for work on HackForums; you need money.

So swallow your pride, go flip a burger and make some money.

"higher learning degrees"... you'd make use of them if you were competent enough. After all, you live in Belgium, which is definitely not a poor country.

Django - January 15, 2020, 8:56 am

(Jan 15, 2020 08:51 AM)Mycroft Holmes Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) For the same reason you juggling through 3 non-specialised short-term jobs and is begging for work on HackForums; you need money.

So swallow your pride, go flip a burger and make some money.

"higher learning degrees"... you'd make use of them if you were competent enough. After all, you live in Belgium, which is definitely not a poor country.

I'm not begging for work in the slightest, I'm seeing what my options are. And I would, except for that I have autism and need extra guidance, something they're unwilling to budge on here. How about you get to know me more before making wild assumptions? You don't live in Belgium, so you have no idea what it's like here.

Thanks for the useless input that perfectly captures the type of person you are.

plebsi - January 15, 2020, 12:33 pm

(Jan 15, 2020 05:58 AM)Mycroft Holmes Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well, I would recommend you to get a real job. Why not work at McDonalds? Base pay started at 12€ per hour, in Belgium.

Bro, seriously. This advice is not for HackForums. I'm not saying its bad advice, but you're giving it at a wrong place. The guy wants to earn money from home. Regardless...

Django - January 15, 2020, 12:34 pm

(Jan 15, 2020 01:33 PM)plebsi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Bro, seriously. This advice is not for HackForums. I'm not saying its bad advice, but you're giving it at a wrong place. The guy wants to earn money from home. Regardless...

Apparently flipping burgers is a fantastic idea according to Mr Genius. If it was that great of a job, I wouldn't be posting for advice on here.

plebsi - January 15, 2020, 12:40 pm

(Jan 15, 2020 01:34 PM)Django Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Apparently flipping burgers is a fantastic idea according to Mr Genius. If it was that great of a job, I wouldn't be posting for advice on here.

Internet is the future, if you're smart enough. You can earn a lot of money, especially if you're living in a small, poor, corrupt country. Flipping burgers is the last resort, try everything, and if you don't succeed, try again.

But if you really need cash, flipping burgers is a great advice.