Thread: WeLeakInfo Seized

iTHX - January 16, 2020, 7:36 am

This is pretty sad, WLI was good for PI. I know there's people that make their money solely from WLI. Rest in peace. ?

Lorem Ipsum - January 16, 2020, 7:38 am

There was a thread like this already. Too bad to see that everything is being seized or closed.

Yeah, sorry if this is a duplicate. I thought I was early. And yes, it is a shame, to think something that is meant to be white-hat and to help society could be shut down.

Not sure, but take a look here:

The major companies are allowed to 'sell' your information, but as soon as we try to find any database we are the 'hackers'.

I think it's a corrupt system, but I'm unable to change it, just trying to open people's eyes.

You said that very well.

I think WLI might be coming back. I read that the seizure is temporary.

edit: I actually think the site isn't even seized and it's just a troll while they fix bugs.

It's an exit scam, of course.

I was on the site a few minutes before the seizure image popped up, said there was a data cluster issue.

Zher0 - January 16, 2020, 10:15 am

There are rumors that it was hacked and that's a false seizure notice.

It would make a lot of sense.

Either way - the notice is false. ???

Silkroad - January 16, 2020, 1:08 pm

They're either trolling or got hacked, the font they used where it says "this domain has been seized" isn't even the same as the real one.

eGod - January 16, 2020, 1:09 pm

This is fake, there's not doubt.

Gashi - January 16, 2020, 1:38 pm

Seen quite a few of websites using CloudFlare getting seized without the actual server getting seized. Not sure if that's the case here.

skipmaster82 - January 16, 2020, 2:48 pm

Guys this isn't fake. Do your research. It's literally on the DOJ website - <https://www.justice.gov/usao-dc/pr/weleakinfocom-domain-name-seized>

Ri?dle - January 16, 2020, 6:43 pm

Looks like only domain name was seized from what I've seen and read, TLD is com so, server is probably not located in US otherwise they would have seized that too, unless, they did seize the server as well and didn't write it in the article. probably will see another mirror website (weleakinfo wasn't the first one anyways).

The difference is when we agree to the terms of service by using a FREE-mium based application, we have already accepted that they are allowed to use our information for marketing purposes. But in this case it's a different story, nobody signs up to a website to have their credentials leaked, and hacked and tbh. I'm surprised that WLI was up for so long on the clear web. Best of luck to the admins in court, hopefully they have some good lawyers.

It must've said somewhere that you cannot use for malicious purposes, i.e. hacking.

If they had censored the passwords, it would make sense as you could use it for legal purposes as well. By allowing users to pay to view the passwords, it kinda makes it obvious what purpose it is meant for. Take a look at a site like haveibeenpwned, they offer a similar service, but they dont necessarily show the details.
