Yeah. Don't forget that the new auction house steals your shit.

I lost around 600k and it's no where to be seen. I didn't buy anything, I posted and it just vanished.

I haven't played hardcore (guild realm first kills, 2.7-2.8k 3v3 rating, etc.) since MOP. Since then I have just been focused on development and moderating the private server in which I own. I just read the patch notes and it looks really awesome, but nothing is gonna take me away from classic right now, lol.

Only way Blizzard will catch me playing anything new from them other than OW and Classic WoW is if they release an official TBC version. Which I hope they do to a certain extent, but this is gonna murder a lot of private servers imo and cut into my donation profit so I have mixed feelings about that, but if they were smart they'd do that.

Classic is too much of a grind for many people and despite what many people say about the aspect of flying mounts ruining the game; I highly disagree. TBC was by far the most fun I ever had with the game. WOTLK was fun too, but Northrend is just kinda depressing, lol.

ANYHOW, this wants me want to play the newer patches again, unfortunately it's already 8.3 and I don't wanna jump in halfway...
