Thread: New Roommate got mad at me. Am I in the wrong?

Slim - January 16, 2020, 6:48 pm

So yesterday my roommate came into my room with my empty protein bottle that I had thrown away in the trash. He got mad and told me that I needed to recycle it and I should have put it in the recycling. I shot him the dirtiest look I've ever shot anybody in my life. And I was like Yep OK. He got the message and walked out but on his way out shouted "it's not supposed to go in the trash. " - My thing is this. I know, I know. Recycling is great and all but when I am in a hurry in the morning And need to get to work the last thing on my mind is reaching up for the recycling bin that's on the shelf high up rather than just throwing something in the trash. What's more, This is my first week living here and he had only mentioned in passing that the recycling bin was up on the shelf. So I am annoyed because honestly it's my stuff. If I wanted to burn this garbage and it was legal to do so then I could do that. I really don't think he gets to tell me what to do with my stuff or how to deal with my stuff. This is my first week living here and he had only mentioned in passing that the recycling bin was up on the shelf. So I am annoyed because honestly it's my stuff. If I wanted to burn this garbage and it was legal to do so then I could do that.

I really don't think he gets to tell me what to do with my stuff or how to deal with my stuff. Like yeah sure I will use the recycling bin now but honestly how dare he tell me how to live my life or what to do. I'm definitely entitled to do whatever I want with the stuff that I pay for.

Thoughts? I know I'm an asshole. But am I wrong?

Bob White - January 16, 2020, 6:50 pm

Nobody has the right to tell you what to do in your own house as long as it does not hurt anyone else. Ignore him and enjoy your life.

Slim - January 16, 2020, 6:50 pm

I also want to add that this kid is a walking Reddit comment section. Every opinion he has he gets from Reddit and it's like he has no original thought.

V?rt - January 16, 2020, 6:51 pm

Honestly screw that dude. You're not wrong at all. I don't recycle at all, mainly because it's not a thing where I'm from. But it's your trash, your problem.

Bob White - January 16, 2020, 6:53 pm

If he has a problem kick him out, or find your own pad, it sounds like you can pay the rent without him, might be time to branch out.

Mullet Muscle - January 16, 2020, 8:19 pm

Tell him to get the fuck over it and worry about himself
Those that worry about what others do live a stressful and unhappy life.
Worry about yourself and you'll be straight

Grey - January 16, 2020, 8:21 pm

I don't think you're in the wrong and he's probably mildly overreacting. He should probably put the recycling bin on the ground right next to the trash bin if he wants it to be utilized. If you did it again after that, then maybe you'd be in the wrong lol scam. - January 16, 2020, 9:12 pm

Jesus christ just recycle you autist.

Thrift - January 16, 2020, 9:15 pm

I think both of you are just stressing over some bullshit. Tell him to knock it off, and you recycle your shit.

Talk it out, hug it out, shake on it, I don't care just stop being ALPHA males to each other 1 week into living together.

Mr. Robot - January 16, 2020, 9:20 pm

Yup you're in the wrong.

You moved into their place and should follow their house rules as far as recycling/rubbish goes. You're filling their trash up with your shit.

If you want to throw it in the trash, do it - but not in their trash. I hated when my old flatmates would throw pizzaboxes in my bin and fill it up.

SIM-3257834 - January 16, 2020, 9:30 pm

This is how you get trash cans that over fill, when a lazy asshole doesn't recycle.

Where would you want to put them at jw ?

Asking for the future lol pizza boxes take up so much space I usually sit them next to the trash and take them out when I take the trash out

Crypt - January 16, 2020, 9:54 pm

Did this happen in between his tree hugging sessions?

In all seriousness, who the hell does he think he is lol.

To each there own but to me em will always be the GOAT juice world is in the song "Godzilla" it was alright I really dont care for juice world but it was alright.

Accord - January 16, 2020, 10:21 pm

If youre new then you should not be mad and be thankful (the approach of your roommate was rude for shouting those things, he shouldve just tell you calmly because youre new there), now you know what to do with your trash. I dont also get the you pay then you do whatever you want part like for example you want to throw it in the sidewalk and nobody should get angry about that, is that what youre trying to say?

Ravioli - January 16, 2020, 10:46 pm

if you just moved there, then follow his rules

if he just moved there, then he should fuck off lol imagine getting triggered over a fucking bottle.

Xen - January 16, 2020, 11:43 pm

I'm in a similar situation as you OP. But the difference is, I own the house (my name is on the rental deeds) and my friend can't stand his parents house so I let him live at mine (he pays rent of course).

Basically, I'm usually the one who takes out the trash and in the UK our recycling bins are taken every week and the non recycling is taken every fortnight. So when he puts his damn cardboard in the trash it pisses me off but unlike your room mate I just move it to the recycling and tell him to stop putting his shit in the wrong place.

See but if he pays less $$ than you, you have a right to do that.

My roommate has the biggest room with a walk in closet, and he pays the same amount. When I asked to trade the room he said sure if I pay a greater amount. He's a lonely hypocrite.

He does pay less than me.

Yeah, fuck that. The guy you're living with just sounds like an asshole and taking it way too far.

Yeah, fugg that. The guy you're living with just sounds like an asshole and taking it way too far. Oh yeah, when I mentioned trading rooms halfway through the lease, he drew the entire apartment and went into MY room while I was away to measure the square footage. Did that to the whole apartment and had the numbers all laid out.

The kicker? He never showed me the paper. Since I told him "Fine, take the room bud."

Never showed me the paper, that he had drawn out. It looked like the scribbling of a mad man. Super detailed down to the very last square foot. He was poised to pitch it when he realized he got to keep the room, radio silence. Only reason I saw the paper was because he forgot to throw it away.

This is the bullshit I live with.

I couldn't agree more with this. If it was his house okay I'd get it, but not in your own house. Tell him to find another place if he can't live with you.

Wtf kind of thread is this? Can you seriously not resolve a conflict on your own? Why do you need strangers' input on how to deal with YOUR roommate, the person you chose to rent/live with? Just mind your own business, act like the dude's not even there and try not to get into each others' way, it's as simple as that.

Aw, someone's still salty I negged him :(

Sounds like the sort of guy who sips soy lattes at Starfucks and then tries to lecture everyone about consumerism and saving the planet. Tell him to keep out of your business.

gore - January 17, 2020, 3:37 pm

There is no "wrong" here. It shouldn't even be a deal like you've now made it out to be. You should've told him exactly what you told us just now and left it at that.

"I was in a hurry, didn't think about it." "My trash, I'll put it where I want" or something even less aggressive would've been fine rather than the passive aggressive stare you gave him over trash.

Made a big deal over nothing tbh. You just moved in, why you trying to cause waves already?

Chill don't overthink just tell him next time that you didn't know or say "I don't recycle" simple ?
