Thread: infinite loop sales signature

Herbert - January 20, 2020, 5:40 pm

size is 980KB, so I'll have to get to compressing it.
I'll update OP with the 500KB version

Update: Welp..
645KB is the best I could get it.. without butchering the quality cutting out the indicator only saves 1KB.

Update 2: Here is another version, 685 KB longer duration

Transition look very nice and smooth, even with 645KB. The only thing I'm missing is a bit more red on the other "tabs" and not only on the first one, but that may just be me lol. Good job!

May I ask what the name of the font is?

Accord - January 21, 2020, 2:56 am

This is so beautiful it gave me orgasm!! 11/9 for sure, but is there any problem with size, we just use the 3rd party image hosting anyway.

Do I get any kind of credits for using my Username? ?
Joking my man, I love the design and the loop.

Zero is this design something for you?

It looks really good yes. The size is a real issue. The one who made my current one had to do some magic for it to be in the right size.

As much as it looks good, unless OP finds a way to compress it, it's pretty much useless. Also if you would want to add some costume things it'll probably be even larger file.

Hmm I didn't think of that. The size is indeed an issue, as it's max 600 by 250 or so right?

Anyway, I thought it would come in handy, but I assume it's just a nice idea nothing more at this point.

We're talking here about the size of the file itself. 500kb is very small for a good looking gif.

Ow sorry. I thought the measurements of the signature itself. I have no idea how to reduce it. I only use picresize for cropping up pics.

There are some smart ways to reduce the size but I'm sure OP already tried them all and got to 645KB at the end which isn't enough sadly.

Now I get it. Too bad that OP couldn't reduce it more without decreasing the quality. Thanks for the elaboration.

Motusora - January 21, 2020, 4:57 am this is better than your current sig , i think you should change it to that :)

anyway how did you compress the size ?

Noticed it too. It's prob to differentiate the start of the loop. Also if he add it to the left side to it will prob make the file size even bigger.

Herbert would removing the minimized panel from both sides help reduce the file size?

It is indeed the start of the loop. But leaving that out means it's not an 'infinite loop'.

it's infinite if you believe in it. ?

It would prob look just fine without them in both sides imo

James Burnham - January 21, 2020, 8:10 am dropped it to 477kb with ezgif.com optimizer

Touché

I actually overlooked it last night, I tried to decrease the bump to 0 opacity to "vanish" or tuck it out of frame and forgot to bring it back in the first segment ???

(Jan 21, 2020 09:10 AM)Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) dropped it to 477kb with ezgif.com optimizer

here is a comparison

ezgif increases speed by 150%, I don't know why but it only saves about 4 KB.
You can tell it washes the colors out quite a bit

Changement - January 21, 2020, 10:21 am

Awsome dude! It looks great!!

Geralt - January 21, 2020, 10:24 am

Nice and smooth! Great design

Herbert - January 21, 2020, 7:42 pm

this is the final product, using it on my thread instead, came out 692 KB

Some good shit man! Would you be willing to sell something with the same concept for my sig? (Not the exact same thing, but I really like your fluid animation.)

OP I converted your latest export that was 690 kb to .webp and got as low as 280 kb.

.webp - 280 KB (59% smaller)

.GIF - 690 KB

Pros

- way smaller file size without loss in quality
- .webp is for animated and unanimated images.

Cons

- couldn't find an image hoster that supports this extension.
I've hosted the .webp mentioned above on my own domain.
- there is no way to export directly to webp at the moment.
- Apple users can't see the image. Safari at least.

I really hope for the wider support on this since we both know how annoying it is to make gifs more compressed or faster animation otherwise the file size would be just too huge.

I've noticed that I didn't apply the right settings since it compressed the image too much. But .webp is way smaller than gif since it is created to be smaller. I hope for more development this year.
