AestheticGamer announced on Twitter that Konami was working on two new Silent Hill, two productions that would have been launched two years ago. Given the popularity of the series, the rumor quickly spread around the web, which prompted the Japanese publisher to speak via our colleagues from PCGamesN . Without denying the revelations of AestheticGamer, one of the spokespersons made it clear that the license could very well come back to the fore. " We cannot communicate anything at the moment, but we are attentive to the feedback from the players and are studying different avenues for the next game, " he said.
