

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Need advice on how to deal with real threats from another country

BinaraKing - February 12, 2020, 6:27 pm

Hello everyone,

Recently, one of my friends was threatened by someone from the UK (we live in the USA). His information was obtained from WLI (WeLeakInfo.com) which was recently taken down by the Department of Justice, and he has received threatening letters to his house as well as gorilla shit (for some apparent reason).

He has taken the liberty of reporting it to his local police department, but we highly doubt that they'll do anything about the situation since the perpetrator and my friend are separated by a whole ocean. Are there any steps that we can take to report it to UK authorities despite being American citizens? We're quite unaware about the process and what to do in this case.

Any help is appreciated, and I await for your replies.
Thanks in advance.

Exe - February 12, 2020, 6:29 pm

Is your friend like an al-qaeda or something whats so real threat about his information

BinaraKing - February 12, 2020, 6:31 pm

(Feb 12, 2020 07:29 PM)exe Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Is your friend like an al-qaeda or something whats so real threat about his information

He's not apart of Al-Qaeda no. The whole situation is ridiculous (and somewhat humorous) regarding the circumstances leading up to the present events. But as a result of certain actions, the perpetrator has ill intentions to do potential harm to my friend.

Boomer - February 12, 2020, 7:13 pm

(Feb 12, 2020 07:31 PM)BinaraKing Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) He's not apart of Al-Qaeda no. The whole situation is ridiculous (and somewhat humorous) regarding the circumstances leading up to the present events. But as a result of certain actions, the perpetrator has ill intentions to do potential harm to my friend.

Can you explain the circumstances? Sounds interesting

Stork - February 12, 2020, 7:49 pm

You live in the states the cuck in the U.K. won't ever do a thing.

Spiritual - February 12, 2020, 9:15 pm

(Feb 12, 2020 07:27 PM)BinaraKing Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hello everyone,

Recently, one of my friends was threatened by someone from the UK (we live in the USA). His information was obtained from WLI (WeLeakInfo.com) which was recently taken down by the Department of Justice, and he has received threatening letters to his house as well as gorilla Clay Davis (for some apparent reason).

He has taken the liberty of reporting it to his local police department, but we highly doubt that they'll do anything about the situation since the perpetrator and my friend are separated by a whole ocean.

Are there any steps that we can take to report it to UK authorities despite being American citizens? We're quite unaware about the process and what to do in this case.

Any help is appreciated, and I await for your replies.
Thanks in advance.

Lmao you're tripping over nothing bro

Phase - February 12, 2020, 9:39 pm

They are most likely just bluffing, don't take it too seriously. What's the worst that can happen and for what kind of information we are talking about? Do they want any payment? What's all about?

Cha0 - February 12, 2020, 9:47 pm

He seems like a kid. Personally I would send a serious looking threat to legal action. I have a buddy who studies law who does those sort of things for me but seeing the way you type, don't think you'd need help.

Snowwy - February 12, 2020, 9:56 pm

I would love to know the real reason behind this OP.

Citoa - February 12, 2020, 10:29 pm

People who threaten you have to have some pretty serious information if they aren't bluffing. Incriminating stuff or card information. So I don't think you have to worry if the info is just passwords or something. Bluff back to him. Say that you are going to sue him and he will stop.

Herbert - February 12, 2020, 11:16 pm

(Feb 12, 2020 11:29 PM)Citoa Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) People who threaten you have to have some pretty serious information if they aren't bluffing. Incriminating stuff or card information. So I don't think you have to worry if the info is just passwords or something. Bluff back to him. Say that you are going to sue him and he will stop. I wouldn't recommend the last part, provoking them will likely give them more reason to continue.

Just don't act on it, it'll blow over.

SNAK - February 12, 2020, 11:16 pm

It looks like an overreaction.

Since when does one take online threats from another country serious?

Threaten him back, describe in detail how he'll regret stepping on your toes.

BinaraKing - February 13, 2020, 6:09 am

Hey guys, sorry for the late reply.

I'll explain the circumstances as it has me laughing as well, to warrant these kinds of threats, albeit the perpetrator has his address to have enough leverage over him I suppose.

Here's how the story goes:

My friend spoiled the plot of a My Little Pony episode (yes you heard that right, these are male teenagers) and the other guy was angry and decided to take revenge on my friend by mailing him gorilla crap and threatening letters.

Really childish situation in my opinion, but I'm honestly unsure as to what to do in this situation since he wants the authorities involved.

pythonalina - February 13, 2020, 6:21 am

The only thing to prevent this to go even bad is to go to police and write a complain on this person, i understand it might kinda embracing, but there is no other choice. If the angry weleakerinfo guy see you ignoring him, he might leak that information to other people living close to your friend. I would definitely suggest to inform police about this, no other legal option for this unfortunately. They know where the person lives and have contact information, might do weird stuff. Be careful and always think what u posting or doing online.

Dhoroty - February 13, 2020, 6:53 am

The best to fully ignore him. Block all communications, and never respond to anything. He'll give it up soon. It is only funny when you see the victim's misery. So don't let him see it.

Shinchan64 - February 13, 2020, 2:14 pm

(Feb 13, 2020 07:09 AM)BinaraKing Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hey guys, sorry for the late reply.

I'll explain the circumstances as it has me laughing as well, to warrant these kinds of threats, albeit the perpatrator has his address to have enough leverage over him I suppose.

Here's how the story goes:

My friend spoiled the plot of a My Little Pony episode (yes you heard that right, these are male teenagers) and the other guy was angry and decided to take revenge on my friend by mailing him gorilla crap and threatening letters.

Really childish situation in my opinion, but I'm honestly unsure as to what to do in this situation since he wants the authorities involved.

Lmao ? at you and your friend. You pissed off some my little pony kid and now you want to hide behind the police and need police protection??? Lol ?

BinaraKing - February 13, 2020, 7:42 pm

(Feb 13, 2020 03:14 PM)Shinchan64 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Lmao ? at you and your friend. You pissed off some my little pony kid and now you want to hide behind the police and need police protection??? Lol ?

It's my friend only. This situation doesn't really affect me at all, my friend only came to ask for my help.

Please read the posts carefully next time. If you don't have anything useful to say, please don't consider posting.

Shinchan64 - February 14, 2020, 4:56 pm

(Feb 13, 2020 08:42 PM)BinaraKing Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It's my friend only. This situation doesn't really affect me at all, my friend only came to ask for my help.

Please read the posts carefully next time. If you don't have anything useful to say, please don't consider posting.

Don't bother asking the question if you plan on not listening to the replies. Again you and your friend are childish if you want the police involved because you spoils a kids show and that kid wants revenge.