Thread: When did you last attempt a replacement of your web browsers?

Xtreme™ - February 14, 2020, 6:51 am

When you first turn on a new Windows 10 PC or laptop the only route you'll initially have to the internet is via Microsoft's Edge web browser or Internet Explorer which is then Uninstalled or just left sitting.

Always used Chrome, felt like it was the most user-friendly out of them all.
But I've heard a lot of people out here using brave, opera and firefox.

Just Setting up "Brave" browser as of now, heard it is the best browser out there.
Do you guys have any better suggestions?

Exe - February 14, 2020, 6:53 am

No other suggestion stick with Brave best browser right now I mean Firefox would be my second

Bellagio - February 14, 2020, 6:53 am

Chrome or brave are my options.

Loukas - February 14, 2020, 6:54 am

I have heard of "Brave", but currently use Firefox. I'll have to look into Brave a little bit more. I know I absolutely can't stand Internet Explorer.

Also by every ads they give you per hour you can earn some BTC as well never, I've used chrome forever now and I have no reason to switch really when all my plugins and other stuff is already in chrome

Takehito Morokuzu - February 14, 2020, 7:00 am

I'm using the new Edge browser, based on chromium. It works really well, it's like chrome but more optimised, and in the next version of Windows 10 is should come pre-installed, meaning that you basically have chrome pre-installed, just a Microsoft version instead of Google.

Chrome is just as bloated and resource-hungry. There's a reason why Chrome's lust for RAM has become such a popular meme on the internet (though Google is experimenting with a new feature to limit some of its memory-guzzling)

I also am attached to Chrome but trying something new doesn't hurt ?

If you have more than 4GB of RAM it shouldn't be a problem. If all else fails use Firefox, or even Opera's GX browser which can limit RAM usage, and it's also based off Chromium.

Yes I have my Rig running with 32Gigz of Ram but I hate to see the Ram usage high on the desktop widget ?

This is exactly why I stopped using chrome and settled for opera.

Also notes on opera if anyone is interested, you couldn't go wrong using the browser it's pretty lightweight, built in adblock and VPN that you can use in incognito or during normal browsing and haven't seen any DNS leaks when using it.

V?rt - February 14, 2020, 9:05 am

Nope, I've been using Brave for a few weeks now, and before that, I used Chrome since it's release. I don't think I'll be changing browsers again.

passCODE - February 14, 2020, 9:06 am

Been using Chrome and will always use it, simple and fast.

SNAK - February 14, 2020, 9:19 am

Tell me u still use Internet Explorer ! It sucks ducks

Stork - February 14, 2020, 9:22 am

Brave is what I'm currently using on my pc, chrome on my samsung. I think chrome is the best but brave is virtually the same for what I need and I get paid for ads lol

Paid for ads? being using it for 2hrs now not a single ad popped out for me

Citoa - February 14, 2020, 9:55 am

I am using brave. I have made a dollar so far just by using it for about a month in a country where there aren't a lot of ads. If you are in America or Canada you will make much more. And if you browse a lot this can go up to 30 dollars a month or something. Check out Mr. Robot's thread about the browser. He made some nice cash.

SIM-4483740 - February 14, 2020, 10:26 am

I still with my choice.

Chrome at first option and Mozilla as second.

yea i heard brave got best alternative browser.

But i still dont have interest.

Luca - February 14, 2020, 10:29 am

I switched to Brave back when it came out in 2017 but after a couple of months I went back to Chrome for the extensions lol

Deployed - February 14, 2020, 10:37 am

If you love your own web browser why even search for a replacement. Chrome is comfortable, Safari is convenient (iOS) - then again chrome has combatted this in past years as well with Sign-In. Also love my Developer Tools as a programmer here. Only instance that I open other browsers is for website testing purposes duplex - February 14, 2020, 10:42 am

Yes I switched to Brave about a year ago. Amazing. I can't back.

Geralt - February 14, 2020, 10:47 am

Used Opera for 5+ years, there is no competition. First, it doesn't suck the shit out of your ram like Chrome, then it has built it ad blocker, VPN, screenshot tool, can use all chrome extensions, connected app to your phone so you can send files/text with 2 clicks between the two, soon they will implement crypto wallet.

And you can download Opera GX (a gaming version of the browser) and see gaming deals and releases on the speed dial and most importantly set how much ram, cpu and internet it will use (for lower end PCs).

No other browser can top that.

Lynx - February 14, 2020, 1:35 pm

I've been using chrome for some time now. I am thinking about switching to firefox when I am reinstalling windows soon.

Threat - February 14, 2020, 1:40 pm

I use firefox, it's an amazing browser. Google chrome is cool and all but my ram gets rekt

I'm actually gonna try out Brave tonight. I've been using Chrome for as long as I can remember.

eXceptional - February 14, 2020, 3:30 pm

I believe Brave is the best option for you as of now. I've been using it for a while now and works awesome. I've also been earning from the browser.

Seen many recommendations on Opera also, will give that a try next week.

Have u tried any other browsers or are u stuck to it from the very beginning?

Considered it a couple times, once when they started advertising other search engines and not being able to customize it, someone actually found a way to remove all of them.

Last month, they pushed out an update that messed with the video pop-out, everyone was outraged because of this, flooded their forums about it.

What they did was, took out all the functionality, capped out resizing. However some users found out that you could disabling 2 tasks in ://flags, others reverted to version 65.

I tried Chrome but man, it's just so far behind. Opera has a lot of really good features built in, and very optimized too!

I've been using Chrome since the day I had the internet.

Others aren't bad but I fell in love with Chrome. ?

Even I loved chrome until yesterday

Reading comments and suggestions of people here on Hf I thought of trying Brave browser Seems pretty chill as of now :)

I want to try Brave too, I've seen so many positive comments about it.

It even rewards you with some small amount of money.

I know , I am so attached to chrome that whenever I need to Google anything my motor skill makes me open chrome , always . i deleted the shortcut to chrome so that I use brave now :P

Xen - February 15, 2020, 5:30 am

I tried Brave, but I always switch back to Chrome.

I use it for everything so all of my accounts are linked across all devices so it's hard for me to leave this ecosystem.

Brave is a chromium based browser so it should feel some familair to any chrome users.

Lorem Ipsum - February 15, 2020, 5:40 am

I am used to Chrome or Safari. Used FireFox in the past when Windows Vista was still 'great' although I never liked the OS.

Tried Brave for mobile, but I do most of the browsing on PC which I something I should use Brave for too I think.
