I only signed up about an hour ago myself. They pay out in Bitcoin and paypal if i remember correctly. Defo Paypal because thats what I am interested in.

I signed up about an hour ago, got my $25 bonus and I am currently at $90 now.

Hope this helps!

Got any screenshots my man? And did you cash out the $100 yet?

Can you show me some proof of this mate

The Web Dude - February 19, 2020, 2:07 pm

How do I attach a snapshot?

TheChaosKiller - February 19, 2020, 2:08 pm

Just checked this out and I don't believe it to be legit until we see actual payouts. The sign up asks for a username, but spells the word username incorrectly, and a lot of the site looks unprofessional and just poor quality.

RushEm - February 19, 2020, 4:17 pm

If you could show some payouts I'd be interested in joining as this could be a referral link to increase only you're account funds.

Yeah, Thanks for your review on this man;

Saved me time.

I mean who on Earth would give off $25 to random internet users for just signing up etc

Does CashInfluence.co really work?

CashInfluence does not work in a way that can benefit you.

In other terms, CashInfluence does not help you make money because it does not pay.

The only ones who make money are the owners of CashInfluence. They want you to believe you'll get paid but they're the only ones who profit.

In other terms, they're using your efforts and your time to make money themselves, which is unacceptable.

If you sign up, you will see $25 in your account balance, and that amount will increase as you get referrals and clicks. It will also increase if you complete the tasks and surveys.

However, the problem is that that amount of money is not real, it's fake. The whole scheme is designed in a way that can make you believe you're making money, but in reality it's not real money.

How do I know it's not real? Well, CashInfluence cannot work the way they tell you.

First of all, there's no way they can afford to pay $2 for each person who clicks your link because the owners of CashInfluence are not getting paid when other people visit their site. There are no ads on their site, so there's no way they get paid for visits.

Second of all, they cannot pay $10 or $15 per referral because no one pays to sign up. So it makes no sense to pay members if the owners are not making money when people register.

Third of all, they will not pay $30 per task because they're not making that kind of money when members complete tasks. Companies don't even pay $10 per task, so you cannot expect to get paid.

The reason they claim you can make that kind of money is that they want you to complete the tasks because that's how these scammers make money.
