Thread: Got five figures to invest. Ideas? \(EUR\)

Nebulance - February 28, 2020, 7:08 am

Hey,

I have the sum above available for some sort of investment or business launch. I have the energy, time and tech-skills revolving around programming to do or work with anything based online.

Looking for "white hat" ideas or suggestions only. No stocks/crypto either as I'd prefer quick and riskier results instead.

Cheers!

This kind of budget is perfect for Dropshipping or Amazon FBA.

Amazon FBA would be your best choice.

go to the dollar store, buy 5 things, list for $2 each on ebay, double your money.

EDIT: Oh shit i thought you said you have $5 to invest lmao. I'd prob get into ecommerce/dropshipping or just about any other online marketing niche that's proven to give results IF you put in the work/investment.

Honestly I would make a long term or invest into one.

Create your own platform, something unique.

Honestly I am stuck in the brainstorm phase.

My advice is always to invest in a area you are interested in,

If i was to start my investments over once again i would for sure go into startups with my capital.

If you want fast money, then dropshipping or Amazon FBA could work, but i would recommend the long run instead.

Since you mentioned you have IT skills, I would open an agency and use paid traffic to get leads.

If you are interested in ecommerce, then that's a great option as well.

I got a new idea that can help SMM panels with new services not on the market and not bots real active users at there own free will for free... investment only requires hosting and script building and a bit of promo to a select audience.

Sounds cliché but yourself, is there a passion you have or an interest?

Take the leap and see what comes of it.
