Thread: Buying into groups

I don't see the agenda of buying into a group. Most users do it and within a year the group is gone. There literally no point there is no "clout" or "elite status. The only one I can say that is decent is Xerotic's group.

Some people use their phones when creating threads. How is this ignorance? The fact of buying into a group?

research. Your facts are based on air and are untrue. iNviZ runs a CREW that has buy-ins, iNviZ as well as anyone else in that crew is not thinking about abandoning it any time within the next 3 years. And if it's up to iNviZ he will keep it for as long as the forum is around.

Also, Xerotic doesn't own a group, he owns a crew.

There is a very clear status and clout that comes with joining a group or crew, it just depends on what group or crew you join. Infamous for example is an OG group that is known within the community of being HQ and an elite group to be in.

- Most groups that you buy into aren't just for the group and the userbar. There is a family of friends behind there that are always ready to help one another and to chat with one another when it's needed or wanted. They enjoy each other's company.
Every member of the group has their own qualities and specialties and everyone is able to share knowledge with one another.

You should really do more research before making stupid threads and accusations.

That's like paying someone 50 dollars to be "friends" with someone. There's sure not a lot of qualities when anybody can just pay 50 dollars to join.

You are so short-sighted.?

Everyone has a personal choice. There are folks here who earn nuts and don't care to spend some cash for groups. You must be having different priorities and prerogative. Also, Xerotic owns a crew and not a group IMO.

Deany - March 1, 2020, 12:14 pm

I'd never buy into a group unless it was animeFAN

Good post op.

Hit up wander when you want to buy out of equilibrium

SIM-3257834 - March 2, 2020, 10:23 am

I'm nearing one year and have no plans to sell. So clearly op is a lying psychopath. Plus I do not have any public group invite sells.
