

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: It's over. Stocks gone x100. There is no good long-term investments.

FaberCastell - March 22, 2020, 3:56 am

It is not a good time to invest "for the long term" after stocks have gone up a x100 during a 10year historical bull market. It's over. Average bull run lasts 3 years, and this one has been over-extended, standing at 10-yrs.

The fact that all of you are buying right now, while we are on the verge of a global collapse just proves my point. We are in a bubble and that coronavirus just popped it. We can only deflate from there.

Don't buy shit. There might be bounces, but those are just bull traps.

Dexter. - March 22, 2020, 7:04 am

I strongly disagree, why would you not invest long term on this great time in the market to buy.

EVEN if what you say is true, why are you scared of investing your DOLLARS? Because if the market dies and all my money goes to 0 I don't need DOLLARS anymore anyways I need goats, to trade, or toilet paper.

There are also tons of great long-term investments. (unless you believe the market is done forever and the US Dollar will disappear. I guess.)

But this post is a fair point to make people think, I stated my opinions just like he has stated his. Everyone should do their own research, and act accordingly off what they find out and what they believe.

webdev77 - March 22, 2020, 9:31 am

(Mar 22, 2020 07:04 AM)Dexter. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I strongly disagree, why would you not invest long term on this great time in the market to buy.

EVEN if what you say is true, why are you scared of investing your DOLLARS? Because if the market dies and all my money goes to 0 I don't need DOLLARS anymore anyways I need goats, to trade, or toilet paper.

There are also tons of great long-term investments. (unless you believe the market is done forever and the US Dollar will disappear. I guess.)

But this post is a fair point to make people think, I stated my opinions just like he has stated his. Everyone should do their own research, and act accordingly off what they find out and what they believe.

Seconding this. Many stocks are only back to their 2016-2018 levels. Hardly a dent in the long term. We could drop another 50% and still have no issue in the long term.

Blakee - March 22, 2020, 1:45 pm

Most ignorant, short-term minded post I've seen LOL. Long term investing is called long term for a reason. I'm not expecting a come back within a few months, I'm buying even more right now to help average the cost from earlier investments. There's no reason long term investors can't begin to recover losses during this period and accelerate future gains.

Saixi - March 24, 2020, 12:12 pm

buy puts then :D great post btw

Bear - March 24, 2020, 2:02 pm

Since your OP, made enough. Strongly disagree with your points.

FaberCastell - March 25, 2020, 2:25 pm

SPX could go to 1500 and possibly under 1000. Russell likely to hit 500.

Shit will hit the fan in USA in April and May.

If we are to get relief, it will be a violent rally in this and beginning of next week going into new quarter, after that, expect nothing but down.

Most of the stocks will never reach their highs again. Certainly not in this decade. Perhaps never.

Dexter. - March 25, 2020, 2:30 pm

(Mar 25, 2020 02:25 PM)FaberCastell Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) SPX could go to 1500 and possibly under 1000. Russell likely to hit 500.

Clay Davis will hit the fan in USA in April and May.

If we are to get relief, it will be a violent rally in this and beginning of next week going into new quarter, after that, expect nothing but down.

Most of the stocks will never reach their highs again. Certainly not in this decade. Perhaps never. Any stock COULD go to any price, at any time. I'm confused.

History repeats itself, stocks go down, have a few rough years. Magically almost like clockwork stocks go back up, reach new highs. Then rinse. Then repeat.

If you do believe this though, you want to transfer me your stocks in your portfolio? If you have any since I guess they are useless now in your eyes? I will gladly take.

#freestonks?

FaberCastell - March 25, 2020, 2:41 pm

(Mar 25, 2020 02:30 PM)Dexter. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Any stock COULD go to any price, at any time. I'm confused.

History repeats itself, stocks go down, have a few rough years. Magically almost like clockwork stocks go back up, reach new highs. Then rinse. Then repeat.

If you do believe this though, you want to transfer me your stocks in your portfolio? If you have any since I guess they are useless now in your eyes? I will gladly take.

#freestonks?

You are being dumped on. Stocks are worthless pieces of paper, you just don't know it yet.

Price is determined by supply and demand and demand is going to die out. Every single poster on here is buying, yet the market dropped 30%. Who the fuck do you think is selling? Magic fairy?

Nope, it's the banks, institutions and every single fucker out there that bought 10 years ago and can't believe now that he is selling it to moms, pops and millennials robinhood investors at x100 the mark-up. AHAHA.

Stock market is a suckers game.

Stevensan - March 25, 2020, 2:45 pm

It doesn't work that way with stocks. The company keeps growing on the long term.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fn3y1hNVgA4>

Dexter. - March 25, 2020, 2:51 pm

(Mar 25, 2020 02:41 PM)FaberCastell Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You are being dumped on. Stocks are worthless pieces of paper, you just don't know it yet.

Price is determined by supply and demand and demand is going to die out. Every single poster on here is buying, yet the market dropped 30%. Who the fuck do you think is selling? Magic fairy? Nope, it's the banks, institutions and every single fucker out there that bought 10 years ago and can't believe now that he is selling it to moms, pops and millennials robinhood investors at x100 the mark-up. AHAHA.

Stock market is a suckers game.

I enjoy stonks very much. You enjoy stonks too I can tell. Stonks for everyone for life. Just messing

Hey man everyone has their opinions on what happens. I just want everyone making money!

FaberCastell - March 25, 2020, 4:25 pm

(Mar 25, 2020 02:51 PM)Dexter. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I enjoy stonks very much. You enjoy stonks too I can tell. Stonks for everyone for life. Just messing

Hey man everyone has their opinions on what happens. I just want everyone making money!
Pure delusion. Classical bubble.

You should re-read what you posted, perhaps even screenshot and save it somewhere for later on.

"I just want everyone to make money". Think about what you said and if it makes sense. There's no free lunch.

I am just trying to warn everybody, i had posted before that a 30% crash would come in 2020, i thought it was going to be due to Boeing, presidential elections or something like that, but i have not imagine a fucking epidemic in my worst nightmare. I am calling a 80% crash from top to bottom now.

SIM-1567847 - March 26, 2020, 6:55 am

(Mar 25, 2020 04:25 PM)FaberCastell Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Pure delusion. Classical bubble.

You should re-read what you posted, perhaps even screenshot and save it somewhere for later on.

"I just want everyone to make money". Think about what you said and if it makes sense. There's no free lunch.

I am just trying to warn everybody, i had posted before that a 30% crash would come in 2020, i thought it was going to be due to Boeing, presidential elections or something like that, but i have not imagine a fugging epidemic in my worst nightmare. I am calling a 80% crash from top to bottom now.
Lmfao.

Somebody's letting a market correction get them antsy. The US stock market has had 47 recessions and has rebounded 100% of the time. You really wanna bet against 100%? Be my guest.

And what's your reasoning for this 80% drop? Is it that you feel corporate debt is too high and companies will start defaulting? Or is it because you just feel your intuition striking up?

keene91 - March 26, 2020, 11:02 pm

I actually think sometime soon is a great time to invest. The market has dropped significantly and as history shows it will eventually rebound and recover. Investing is a long term process anyway, not a get rich quick scheme.

FaberCastell - March 27, 2020, 4:10 pm

Oh gosh, the amount of ignorance.

We are in a consumer-based economy and EVERYTHING consumer based is FUCKING SHUTTING DOWN.

RESTAURANTS DEAD
PUBS DEAD
AVIATION DEAD
TRAVELLING DEAD
TOURISM DEAD
CRUISESHIPS DEAD
SHOPPING DEAD

This is basically a collapse of the global economy. I think a 80% drop will be justified. If you are unfortunate enough to be holding stocks, i'd sell going into the new quarter. You might be lucky and we could still pump for the next few days.

Zoomers - March 27, 2020, 4:15 pm

Most people are looking at long-term.. if you look at longterm look at the united states they are doing the stimulus so that people can atleast survive for now.. but after this their going to have to do actions that provoke economic activity. Your making assumptions and yes... if you can't survive sell the stocks if you have the money than hold.

FaberCastell - March 27, 2020, 4:21 pm

If you have only invested in the last year or two, then stop talking shit about investing for the long term. You bought the top of the bubble, and you will NEVER EVER breakeven in the next 10-30 years(adjusted for inflation)

Stevensan - March 27, 2020, 4:22 pm

(Mar 27, 2020 04:10 PM)FaberCastell Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Oh gosh, the amount of ignorance.

We are in a consumer-based economy and EVERYTHING consumer based is fugging SHUTTING DOWN.

RESTAURANTS DEAD
PUBS DEAD
AVIATION DEAD
TRAVELLING DEAD
TOURISM DEAD
CRUISESHIPS DEAD
SHOPPING DEAD

This is basically a collapse of the global economy. I think a 80% drop will be justified. If you are unfortunate enough to be holding stocks, i'd sell going into the new quarter. You might be lucky and we could still pump for the next few days.

The supermarkets and Amazon are running out of toilet paper. Don't forget to mention companies that capitalizing from the Coronavirus.

Options Trading - March 28, 2020, 12:06 pm

(Mar 24, 2020 12:12 PM)Saixi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) buy puts then :D great post btw

First time I've seen someone else that does options on here, hold your puts strong and close to your heart brother

bdawn - March 28, 2020, 5:25 pm

(Mar 28, 2020 12:06 PM)Ro77 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) First time I've seen someone else that does options on here, hold your puts strong and close to your heart brother

Careful, i got bitten for doing some puts (partially cause I held too long).

10/10 wouldn't recommend $SPY options unless you have a high risk tolerance ?

Inkling - March 28, 2020, 5:36 pm

Stock market averages 7% gains, some years -15 some years +22. Average return is 7% on your money. We are in a recession not a depression don't get it twisted.

FaberCastell - March 30, 2020, 2:27 am

I wouldn't recommend puts right now either. Because if we ever pump, we will do so in the next 2 days. Market does look short term bottomish.

Just avoid trading in general, because it really requires tremendous skill and strict risk management.

If you don't know what you are doing, don't trade real money because i guarantee you, you are going to lose over the long term. It takes 3-5years of full time and 10,000hours+ to become profitable. Just how it is.

VoIPv2 - March 30, 2020, 4:21 pm

(Mar 22, 2020 03:56 AM)FaberCastell Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It is not a good time to invest "for the long term" after stocks have gone up a x100 during a 10year historical bull market. It's over. Average bull run lasts 3 years, and this one has been over-extended, standing at 10-yrs.

The fact that all of you are buying right now, while we are on the verge of a global collapse just proves my point. We are in a bubble and that coronavirus just popped it. We can only deflate from there.

Don't buy Clay Davis. There might be bounces, but those are just bull traps.
Buy Puts!

Ivex - March 30, 2020, 4:38 pm

(Mar 27, 2020 04:21 PM)FaberCastell Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If you have only invested in the last year or two, then stop talking Clay Davis about investing for the long term. You bought the top of the bubble, and you will NEVER EVER breakeven in the next 10-30 years(adjusted for inflation)For 30 years - you on crack?

That would be an unprecedented event. Do you know how royally fucked the world economy would be if that was to happen? I'm not an economics student, I'm a political economy student so I won't argue you on whether your numbers are realistic. However, if things went that bad, people wouldn't be thinking about their portfolio, the whole world economy would be failing.

Anyway, it's probably 35 years until I'll wanna sell my portfolio, maybe 40.

You're also not factoring in dividends or the fact people will consistently invest, not just invest now and then never again.

Don't hit me with that BS that because I haven't been investing in a long time I'm not going to be a long term investor. I watched my stocks drop without flinching. It's where I save my money. I don't need that money right now. I'll build my portfolio to a level that pays all my expenses with dividends regardless of market volatility.

Neal Caffrey - April 1, 2020, 4:32 am

(Mar 22, 2020 09:31 AM)webdev77 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Seconding this. Many stocks are only back to their 2016-2018 levels. Hardly a dent in the long term. We could drop another 50% and still have no issue in the long term.

With cases not even peaking yet and panic not setting in, it would be more sensible to begin buying lightly and start averaging down.