Thread: When do you think you'll "retire" from HF?

Social Engineer - March 27, 2020, 8:13 am

So I've been on here almost 9 years now, and I've been inactive on a few occasions where I thought I wouldn't come back.

But there's just something about this beauty of a forum that keeps pulling me back, I don't even go to any other forum.

This place is just a gold mine, no matter what age, or what you're trying to learn, it's amazing.

Personally I think I'll be using HF on and off for as long as I know, but do you guys have an age in mind where you're like,
right - now no more forums/HF?

Dotexe - March 27, 2020, 8:17 am

I don't believe i will retire anytime soon. But one thing is for sure, when Omni decides to close the community, i will have to accept it and simply move on to a different platform

I don't think there is a community out there greater than HFs, I feel if Omniscient did ever get to that point, he may decide to sell it or just have someone else overlook the whole thing as Admin. This community is too great to just put an end to like that, and Omniscient is great so he isn't allowed to leave us either :(

Omni won't let someone else run this community, as for your first statement, maybe from the active pov, yes. But there are quite few platforms that are fairly active in the BH scene. And it's a skid-free

I'm not familiar with any since I didn't find the need to look elsewhere tbh, HF has always served it's purpose for me and quite well. But I guess I'd look into a few as backup, even though I don't seeing myself being anywhere near as active as I am on HF.

Got to know about HF like 1 year ago and I got no doubt of leaving this forum, made some cash on the way and shitt tons of knowledge.

This forum is full of valuable knowledge, behind all the random crap.

I've also been on and off for the past 9 years, really fell in love with this site again now as I'm working more with computers after a while. Never planning to leave, not permanently

SIM-3609092 - March 27, 2020, 8:46 am

I will retire when the community is dead. It's a pretty nice place to chill when you're bored.

I go through phases on Hf where I'll go from really active to not posting for a couple months. I don't think I'll ever "retire", probably just lurk in the shadows

I do not think I ever will. I am thinking of having an AI made to mimic me for when I die just so it will stay on Hf and post lol. I just get too much content from here so it is hard to say I will leave.

It is literally a goldmine this forum, you'll find everything and anything.

Pink Floyd - March 27, 2020, 9:16 am

The journey has just began & around in year 2050;

I will be browsing HF in a Hologram beamed in Air from my helmet & replying to users with my voice, while I will be riding my Pod Roaming around city to get some air.

Imagine

gore - March 27, 2020, 9:16 am

Same thing, on and off for the last 8 years or so. Not sure when I'll leave for good, no time frame in mind.

oRequiem - March 27, 2020, 9:35 am

Don't think that will ever happen.

The only thing I'd retire is services to provide. This is the only forum I go on as well. I don't see myself completely quitting the forum.

I'll retire never even after I'm dead.

SIM-3257834 - March 27, 2020, 11:21 am

It really takes no effort to browse a site, you're making a sound like a job where old age will eventually impact you physically.

?ystem - March 27, 2020, 11:29 am

I've been a member here for going on ten years when June comes around the bend. I've had periods where I was relatively inactive, much the same as you OP, but I'm ultimately drawn here for the content and opportunities there are to learn here. I don't see myself "retiring" or leaving the forums pretty much ever.

Net - March 27, 2020, 11:30 am

I've also been here for a long time, since around 2014. Lost my login info for my first account tho and never really bothered to make another.

Thinking of being more active here for some time, so who know what the future might bring?

Grim - March 27, 2020, 11:37 am

Probably won't been here for around 10 years and I still am gaining knowledge and learning new things here. I wonder why people don't think Omni wouldn't let others run the site when he leaves? I'm sure one is the current staff would be more then happy to take over. Xerotic already does a tone for the site so it wouldn't really be much different.

Sadly feel like the time is coming closer and closer. I'd love to hit 10 years on here then leave the site for a few years, come back in another 5 and see what's all changed.

Maybe when I get busier with other things in my life.

Definitely planning on taking a bit of a break from the forum once I get the lounge award.

I doubt I will. There are a lot of sites I was apart of from years ago...some being from when I first got a taste of the internet. Nostalgia if anything..and the small home that I encounter old friends. I have over the years encountered old friends or found news on them but usually I leave them be if they moved on with life (some people get married, move, get jobs, go to school, or end up passing away. It's a sad feeling really).

Even though I use Reddit and Discord. They just can't replace browsing HF.

I don't know why exactly. Maybe the content, maybe the people, maybe the stuff going on here or the shit going on in the world.

But there's just something about this beauty of a forum that keeps pulling me back, I don't even go to any other forum.

This place is just a gold mine, no matter what age, or what you're trying to learn, it's amazing.

Personally I think I'll be using HF on and off for as long as I know, but do you guys have an age in mind where you're like,

right - now no more forums/HF?

once omni wants to close everything. thats when i will "retire"

Dorrance - March 31, 2020, 9:24 am

Honestly I should of retired by now, but I like the online world it's fairly easy. You learn something new everyday, I might retire once I bet my 30s.

I haven't been active after the old theme was ditched and reps and other things got removed.

But here I am again, I barely recognize anyone nowadays.

I've been here for 10 years today, and got no plans on retiring so far. Who know's.

Maybe I'll be here to the day HF doom day.

Be pretty cool if Omni had an award for those here for 5, 10 and 20 years. 5 and 10 is nothing. 20 be the GOAT ;)

Im an old timer just like you and I dont use any other forums either. Its so difficult to leave this site haha, ive really tried, but in the end you always come back.

I come and go but nothing keeps me here anymore. I just drop by lol. The Linux section is dead and moved onto unix hub, but even that's moved onto something else.

Not sure. I never thought about leaving, but i'm way less active now compared to 2+ years ago.

I've been around for ten years at this point, can't see much changing that now. I'm sure there will come a day where I just phase out of coming here, but I don't know that it'll be any time soon. Probably won't be until the activity here drops to a point where being here frequently is no longer enjoyable.
